Another Skillings Heir.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 5.—Charles D. Skillings, a newspaper man of West Superior, Wis., is heir to an estate in Portland, Me., worth probably five millions. Skillings was apprised of his luck through a press dispatch in which one Waterman, of Meriden, Conn., was said to be heir to the estate of John Skillings.

From a copy of a lease in possession of C. D. Skillings it appears that April 10, 1792, John Skillings leased to Hiram Ilesly a certain tract of land with buildings, in what is now the heart of Portland for the period of 99 years. This term expired last year. Steps will be taken to recover the property.

He lost his wife about a year ago and since then had been in very low spirits. He was making a tour around the world. He was alone at the time of the shooting, and it was done so quietly that few of the guests heard the report of the weapon. An inquest will be held to-morrow.

BUSINESS TO-DAY.

The Grand Army Delegates in Session

While the Others Are Taking in the Sights.

The Color Line Question to Cause Trouble.

Discharged Union Soldiers Have a Grievance.

Interesting Address of the Commander-in-Chief, in Which He Recommends Separate Posts in the South.

Detroit, Aug. 5.—Pleasure gives way to business to-day with those comrades of the Grand Army who are delegates to the national encampment, and while the veterans, upon whose shoulders there is no official care, are enjoying themselves at brigade and regimental reunions, picnics and river rides, the men who make and unmake the laws of the order, are gathered in Beecher's hall, with big sentries guarding each of the doors.

Quite a number of the delegates, including Past Commander-in-Chief, Louis Wagner, of Philadelphia, did not arrive in time for the festivities of yesterday but there was a full roster in the hall, when at 10:30, the 25th annual session of the national encampment was called to order by Commander-in-Chief Veazey.

No time was lost in getting down to business. The committee on credentials which had done its work in advance, made a brief report showing a full representation and no contests, and then the commander-in-chief, and Adjutant-General Goulding, submitted their annual reports.

Commander-in-Chief Veazey said:

"COMRADES: This is the silver anniversary of a birth, not of a wedding. The wedding occurred when the bridegrooms, the youth of the land, enlisted in its defense. Abraham Lincoln celebrated the marriage nuptials. Columbia was the bride. Her vesture was the nation's flag. The pledge to establish that flag over the domain of secession was the pledge of her hand.

"When the pledge was grandly redeemed through bloody strife, through suffering and death, and after the victors had placed on the brow of the bride a new diadem, whose gems were honor, valor, fame, liberty untainted with slavery, a country reunited and free, the fruit of that marriage was the Grand Army of the Republic, an offspring worthy of its royal parentage.

"The man must be blind indeed, who has failed to see in recent years as time has impelled our column toward the river which all mankind must cross, that the G. A. R., as it has become better known, has been constantly marching to a higher plain in the estimation of the people generally, as well as the veterans; as the latter are seeking membership in great numbers; that the spirit of true comradeship is constantly taking a deeper hold in the hearts of comrades, and that time has not diminished, but quickened their pride of service; not quenched but intensified the ardor of their love of the flag and all it represents; not dulled, but enlivened the soldierly spirit which they exhibited in the old heroic days. Any charge to the contrary is an insult to the veterans as a class and as individuals.

After referring pathetically to the death during the past year of Sherman, Porter, Hamlin, Devins, Tobin and other honored members of the order, the commander-in-chief continued:

"The present administration encountered the same disturbances in the departments of Louisiana and Mississippi that had troubled my predecessors. From various sources of information that have been accessible to me, I believe a large majority of both white and colored comrades in the departments of Louisiana and Mississippi are strong in the conviction that it would be for the best interests of all individually and of their posts, and of the order, to have a separate department in Louisiana and some of the other gulf states made up of such posts as may apply to come into it, and having concurred in jurisdiction with the department already established in such states; concurrent in respect to the chartering and mustering of posts, but each department having exclusive jurisdiction over the posts which it may receive. My best judgment after a year of painstaking investigation is that it would be wise to confer upon my successor the authority to create such a department. He may either find it necessary or think it best to exercise the power conferred.

"The commander in chief advises that the executive officers refrain from endorsing appeals for contributions for any purpose, however worthy, except those expressly named in the objects of the order. Veterans are apt to be strongly influenced by such indorsements. It recommended that congress be appealed to to provide for the maintenance of the Mt. McGregor cottage. The G. A. R. has been paying the expenses because no one else assumed them.

"The argument in favor of service pension legislation has been urged upon congress without avail, but under the disability pension bill about 1,000 pensions are being allowed per day and will be until the docket of applications is substantially cleared. The number who thought the bill too liberal is rapidly diminishing as the act becomes better understood.

"The commander in chief recommends that the legislation given preference in the civil service to discharged soldiers be amended so as to recognize the idea of service apart from discharge or disability.

"Comrades, our order has not reached its high water mark, neither in numbers nor in glory nor power. In cultivating fraternity and charity it works on the same lines with some other organizations. But there is another basic principle of our order which is in a sense at least, peculiar to it—it is the broad principle of loyalty. Here we provoke criticism, and on the ground that there is no disloyalty now.

"True, no class or section is engaged in disloyal acts; but as is well known there are men here and there throughout the land who adhere to the pernicious doctrine that secession by a state is a right, and therefore resistance to attempted coercion is not disloyalty or rebellion.

The iron heel of Andrew Jackson crushed the first threats of overt action based upon this doctrine.

When, in the next instance, the threat was carried into effect, it required the scourge of war and rivers of blood to suppress it. A third effort is not likely to appear again in the south, because it is not conceivable how the interests of that action can be so advantageously situated as they are within the union.

But the doctrine permeates the political literature of the country. The seed took deep root in the disciples of Calhoun and other who labored to plant it. As our country extends its borders and sections become antagonistic in interest, who can say that another effort may not be made somewhere.

So long as this danger exists, however remotely, the work of the G. A. R is not finished. No organization since the war has done so much for the country, as the G. A. R.

It appeals to every loyal hand that drew a blade or carried a musket.

Therefore no union soldier has done his full duty as a citizen unless he has given the order the benefit of his comradeship in it.

In closing I desire to renew the expression of gratitude which I made a year ago for the great honor you conferred on me.

Having intended to wrong no one, and having received no affront from anyone, I say to one and all from the deepest recesses of my heart. I thank you, and God bless you.

Feeling on the Color Line.

There is one serious dispute which threatens to mar the serenity of the silver encampment of the G. A. R. It is peculiar that after the organization has been in existence a quarter of a century it should be threatened with disruption by the everliving "color question," but such is the fact. The men in the southern states who were loyal to the union in the dark days of '61 are the ones who insist that the negro has no place in the social gatherings of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Col. George T. Hedges, commander of the department of Louisiana and Mississippi, is quartered at the Biddle house, together with several trusty aids, who have come prepared to fight the matter out. "Unless the thing is straightened out during the encampment," he said to-day, there wont be a white member of the G. A. R. south of the Ohio or Potomac a year hence. They are outnumbering us in the posts, thus putting us directly under them. That we will not stand. Now we want to rule ourselves and have the colored people go by themselves. Seven out of ten of the colored posts of New Orleans are in favor of it, but as you know there are always some kicks and I understand a delegation from the colored posts are coming to fight us. We have received information that two of Chicago's most influential colored men are on their way to assist us and we think we will gain our point. All we ask for is a provisional department embracing Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas."

A dozen or more southern white men expressed themselves in a similar strain. There are two sides to the colored question and Col. James Lewis (colored) administrator of police and administrator of public works of New Orleans, is the champion of the colored side. When asked what the trouble was in Louisiana was, he said: "I never knew a time when there was no trouble in New Orleans? It was a Louisiana man that fired the first shot on Fort Sumter. It was a Louisiana man that beat Gen. Beauregard for administrator of public works, and I am that man, and I did something the union generals did not do. The first colored regiment was raised in Louisiana. Louisiana was the first state for four days. The Italian riot was in Louisiana, and now the colored trouble is sprung there. Louisiana is always in trouble. Well, there were 24,800 colored men enlisted in the army from Louisiana, more than from all other states together. We were regularly enlisted, we fought as history tells you, and then we were honorably discharged. We claim for things to our credit we had all the rights of any man to form G. A. R. posts. We did this and we were recognized by General Alger when a fight was made on us. We have nine posts with a membership of over $1,000, yet we are not recognized by the commander of our war department. We get no representation in the convention and he ordered to report to the commander-in-chief. We have prepared a strong case on the matter and all I ask is twenty-five minutes in which to present it to a committee or the convention itself. The department commander thinks we want social recognition. I claim the order is not a social one, but a historical and fraternal one."

Secretary Foster and the Soldier.

Secretary Foster promises to come in for some attention by the Grand Army. This is because of the recent wholesale discharges from the New York custom house. There were eighty-six men removed, and of these sixty-one were on the unclassified lists—that is, they were not among those who have to be chosen after competitive examination before the Civil service board. Of the sixty-one forty were veteraus of the G. A. R. Now, the G. A. R. stands by its men with a vigor and aggressiveness which is unique.

Every one of the posts to which the 40 men belong has prepared resolutions bitterly denouncing the dismissal from the customs service of the men in question, and reminding the powers that be of the clause in the civil service reform law which declares that veteran soldiers or sailors who have been honorably discharged from the military or naval service of the United States shall have the preference in the civil service and shall not be discharged if there is any civilian who can be sacrificed instead.

All the posts to which the discharged men belong are present at the encampment; and every one of them stands ready to denounce Secretary Foster for his action.

At first the indignation of the New York G. A. R. posts was directed against Collector Erhardt, who is himself a veteran of the war and a G. A. R. man, and the collector's office has been besieged with G. A. R. representatives since the removals were made. But the G. A. R. men have found out that the retiring collector is not the official to whom the blame is justly to be attached.

The report of Special Agents Wilbur and Chance recommended the dismissal of a certain number of men and the reduction of salaries of others, sufficient to reduce the expenses of the collector's office to the extent of $89,000 a year.

Collector Erhardt protested against this strenuously, and declared that if the appropriation must be cut down the collector's force should not be reduced more than $30,000.

But Secretary Foster was obdurate. He insisted on a reduction amounting to $86,000 a year. This necessitated the dismissal of 86 men.

Secretary Foster will be forced to order the reinstatement of about 30 of the 40 G. A. R. veterans who have been dismissed from the custom house.

Adjutant General Gouldings.

Adjutant General J. H. Gouldings' annual report for the year ending June 30, shows that there are in the order 45 departments with 7,409 posts and 398,07 comrades in good standing.

The sum expended in charities during the year was $333,699 against $217,957 the previous year.

There have been 5,530 deaths this year against 5,478 in 1890.

The total apparent membership 444,307. Suspensions, delinquencies and transfers bring the number down to 398,607.

The adjutant general believes that if departments select the best men for adjutants and quartermasters and adopt longer tenures of office the order can be greatly strengthened and the membership raised to 600,000 or 700,000 within five years as there are over 1,200,000 old soldiers now living.

The question of a sinking fund to meet the emergencies of old with its diminishing membership and dues is worthy of consideration.

It is recommended that national encampments be held not earlier in the year than August 20, to allow more time for making up the national reports after department reports are received.

Quartermaster-General Taylor.

In his annual report, Quartermaster-General John Taylor gave the receipts for the fiscal year as $39,100; expenditures, $37,396; balance, $1,804. The assets of the organization he gave as $24,711. The posts, he said, as a general rule, were prompt in meeting their obligations and financial future of the order was apparently a bright one.

Inspector-General J. W. Burstine in his report complained of the inadequate facilities afforded his department to perform its duties because of the change in the dates for inspection constantly made by the national encampment. He had been able to secure reports of inspection from only a part of the posts, but such as had been inspected were in good condition.

B. F. Stevenson, surgeon general, reported the number of deaths in the order, as far as reported during the year, to be 3,157, among them the Eminent Comrades W. T. Sherman, Admiral D. D. Porter and Gens. Charles Devens, E. F. Noyes, John W. Fuller and John McNeil. In regard to the pension list Dr. Stephenson read a letter from Commissioner Raum giving the number of pensioners now on the rolls and the amount paid by the government for pensions during the present fiscal year. Summarized it is: Pensions on the rolls May 31, 1891—Army invalids, 415,615; widows, 195,759; navy invalids 5,499; widows, 233.

Act of June 27, 1890: Army invalids, 56,417; widows, 8,114; navy invalids, 3,885; widows, 1,118.

Mexican war: Survivors, 16,350; widows, 6,940.

War of 1812: Survivors, 295; widows, 7,753. Total, 630,324.

To pay these pensioners will cost, during present fiscal year, about $116,000,000.

The W. R. C.

Over seven hundred fine looking women, a large majority having many silver threads in their hair, were gathered in the Church of Our Father this morning when the ninth national convention of the Woman's Relief Corps was called to order by Mrs. Mary Sears McHenry, of Denison, Ia., the national president.

In her address of welcome and review she dwelt upon the necessity of keeping before congress the needs of the army nurses, and deplored the failure year after year of the efforts to extend to these deserving women the benefits of the pension laws.

Congress, she said, should pass a special pension law for them, and to that end the record should be completed as soon as possible. So far 26,000 names were enrolled, but of 18,000 more there was no record whatever.

The speaker made reference to the fact that considerable work was being done among the colored people and that corps auxiliary to posts of colored veterans had within a year been organized as follows: 12 in Virginia, four in the Carolinas, three in Florida, three in Louisiana, two in Tennessee, one each in Georgia, Arkansas and Mississippi.

National Secretary Hannah Plimpton of Iowa, next presented her report showing a total membership of 77,779, divided into 2,022 corps and covering nearly every state and territory. Owing to the delinquent reports, which were a discredit to the order, there had been a loss of 321 corps, representing a membership of 12,841 during the year. The general and relief funds on hand aggregate $1 60,826.

A Picnic at Belle Island.

Something of a novelty in the way of entertainment for the veterans was provided by the city authorities to-day in the shape of a monster picnic at Belle Isle park which was participated in by over ten thousand comrades and their friends. A bounteous lunch preceded the formal exercises Mayor Pingree welcomed the gathering and ex-Senator Thomas W. Palmer, who was made chairman, delivered one of his characteristic speeches. Ex-President Hayes and Gen. Miles will talk this afternoon.

The delegates to the annual convention of the national association of naval veterans filled one of the big rooms in the court house. Thomas L. Johnson presided. The desirability of a revision of the pension laws in the interest of the naval comrades is the chief question to be considered.

ROBBING A FARMER.

He Expects the Thieves to Steal His House Next.

Canton, O., Aug. 5.—Curtis Richardson, a farmer living near this city, is the victim of a series of depredations that bid fair to leave him neither household goods nor farm stock if continued.

On July 28 his house was entered and a quantity of money taken, while household goods were scattered over the floor and destroyed. A week later the house was again entered and money taken, while the household goods were scattered about.

Last Thursday evening a calf was removed from near the front door, taken to a remote corner of the yard and killed. Early in the spring a smokehouse belonging to Mr. Richardson was entered, meat taken, and the house burned, and later a valuable colt so badly injured that it died.

The police authorities are investigating the affair, but it is shrouded in mystery, and no clue to the perpetrators has been obtained.

VERMONT LEGISLATURE.

The Special Session to be Held August 25.

The Direct Tax Fund to be Considered—Gossip About Edmunds' Successor.

St. Albans, Vt., August 5.—Gov. Page will issue his call this week convening the legislature in special session on Tuesday, August 25, to consider the disposition of the United States direct tax money, amounting to $179,000. The governor intends to recommend an additional appropriation by the legislature for the world's fair. It is said that the governor will announce his selection of a successor to Senator Edmunds about the time the legislature convenes. Ex-Governor Smith is a warm supporter of Secretary Proctor for the senatorship and has written an open letter to Gov. Page in favor of the appointment of the Secretary.

SHOT ON A TRAIN.

One Passenger Fired Upon By Another.

St. Marys, O., August 5.—(Special)—L. Shappel, an agent of the Standard Oil company, was shot by a fellow named Wise in the smoking car on the Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw railroad yesterday afternoon.

The particulars as well as could be learned are these: A friend of Wise was ejected from the train for not paying his fare. Shappel remarked that every man should pay his fare or not be allowed to ride, which angered Wise and a quarrel ensued between the two in the course of which Wise drew his revolver and shot Shappel in the arm, making a bad wound.

Wise was taken into custody by the conductor and when Rockford, the next station, was reached, was turned over to the authorities, placed under arrest and lodged in jail to await trial. The shooting occurred between Celina and Rockford.

PATTISON IS IN LINE.

He Will Investigate the Keystone Affair.

Trying to Trace the Stolen Millions.

Pennsylvania's Governor Has Been Given Permission by Secretary Foster to Proceed.

Washington, Aug. 5.—Secretary Foster has received Gov. Pattison's letter to him in which he asks for permission to appoint experts to examine into the affairs of the Keystone national bank of Philadelphia to ascertain what became of $1,500,000 of state and city funds.

The following reply was sent this afternoon:

Hon. Robert E. Pattison, Governor of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg, Pa.

SIR:—I have the honor to inform you that the secretary of the treasury has referred to me for reply to your communication of the first instant.

In accordance with the request therein contained, I have this day authorized the receiver of the Keystone national bank to permit a committee of three or five citizens, to be designated by you, to examine the books, papers and accounts of said bank, with the view to ascertain what deposits of public moneys, in which the state of Pennsylvania had or has any interest, were made in said bank by John Bardsley, the late treasurer of the city and county of Philadelphia, and what became of the money thus deposited.

In accordance with your suggestion the authorization is limited to an examination as to deposits of public funds passing through the hands of John Bardsley, as treasurer of Philadelphia, and agent of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and of such funds as the said commonwealth may be directly or indirectly interested.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) E. S. LACEY, Comptroller.

INNOCENT MAN HANGED.

Strong Argument Against the Death Penalty on Circumstantial Evidence.

Beatrice, Neb., August 5.—Jack Marion was hanged in this city in March, 1887, for the murder of John Cameron. Cameron and Marion were fellow travelers bound west. The murder was supposed to have been committed in 1873. The dead body was found near here and circumstances indicated it to be Cameron's.

Marion was arrested in 1883 in the Indian Territory and had two trials for the crime. In the first trial he was convicted and sentenced to be hanged. The supreme court granted him a new trial and he was again convicted and was hanged.

It now appears that Cameron is not dead but was a few days ago discovered to be living at Lacrosse, Kas. He had only recently learned that Marion had been hanged charged with his murder. Cameron has lived a number of years in Mexico and Alaska returning to the United States less than a year ago.

HAD TO HAVE HER SAY.

Women Get Into Trouble in Saratoga.

Mrs. Judge Hilton Creates a Scene in the Dining Room of the Windsor.

Saratoga, Aug. 5. The subject of gossip here is the story of a wordy altercation and an assault made by Mrs. Henry G. Hilton upon Mrs. G. W. Lente and Miss Willis more than a week ago, in the public diningroom of the Windsor hotel and in the presence of a large number of guests.

The Windsor is the most select and aristocratic hotel in Saratoga. It is owned by Judge Hilton, and is under the management of Willard Lester. It is the town stopping place of all the members of the Hilton family and some of them dine there daily.

About two weeks ago Miss Willis and Mrs. Lente became guests of the Windsor. They are sisters. Mrs. Lente is the widow of the late Dr. G. W. Lente, well known in New York and Saratoga, and her sister, Miss Eloise Willis, is an actress. She was formerly connected with the Wallack company, and had also been a member of the John McCullough company.

Both these ladies are of stylish and striking appearance. Mrs. Lente is a blonde, stout, and a little below the medium height, but is still a handsome woman, while Miss Willis, also of medium height, but of more graceful figure, is a brunette, with dark brown hair and large brown eyes that are very expressive and captivating.

As was quite natural these ladies soon became popular at the hotel and made many acquaintances who were delighted with their society, but it would seem that Mrs. Hilton took a great dislike to them, and, as is alleged, said unpleasant things about them.

On the lake shore is a popular resort known as Crum's, where select driving parties go for game dinners and to have a good time. Some who go there often have lockers in which they keep their own glass and chinaware for private use.

Mrs. Hilton heard that a party which went out to Crum's a week ago last Saturday, and of which Miss Willis and Mrs. Lente were guests, had opened her locker and made free use of its contents, it being at the same time intimated that the locker was opened with a key in the possession of a gentleman in the party whose relations with the Hilton family are of a very close and confidential nature.

When these alleged familiarities came to the attention of Mrs. Hilton she is said to have gone at once, and in not the most cool and amicable frame of mind to the Windsor hotel to find Mrs. Lente and Miss Willis. The interview when she did find them was a stormy one.

Mrs. Hilton gave them a lecture that made them aware what was her opinion of them. The accusation made against Miss Willis and Mrs. Lente was received with a silence which was all the more provoking, and it is reported, but denied by Mr. Lester, that a demand was made of him that "those women" should be at once turned out of the hotel.

That they were expelled from the house is denied, but they left and went to the United States hotel, where they were received as guests and assigned to luxurious apartments. Whether they are still there could not be learned, and indeed, it is very difficult to get at the real facts in the case, as all interested parties seem resolved to withhold all information. All the copies of last night's New York papers that had any mention of the affair were bought up before their arrival and not a copy was on the streets or for sale at the news room.

A. R. Hummel, of the law firm of Howe & Hummel, of New York, who is here, has been retained by Mrs. Lente and Miss Willis, with instructions to bring suit for damages against Mrs. Hilton for alleged defamation of character.

Declared for Blaine.

Mercer, Pa., Aug. 5.—The Mercer county republican convention in session here adopted a resolution declaring Hon. James G. Blaine their choice for president in 1892.

WARMLY RECEIVED.

The World's Fair Commissioners in Berlin.

Berlin, Aug. 5.—Mr. William Walter Phelps, the United States minister, yesterday accompanied Messrs. Handy, Bullock, Butterworth, Lindsay, and Peck, comprising the foreign committee of the Chicago Columbian exposition, to the office of Herr Von Boetticher, secretary of the imperial home office and representative of the chancellor.

Herr Von Rottenburg, under secretary in the the chancellorie of the empire, was also of the party. Mr. Phelps presented the members of the committee to Herr Von Boetticher, who welcomed them in a very cordial manner. The committee described the plan and scope of the exhibition and in the conversation that ensued Herr Von Boetticher expressed his confidence that Germany would be represented at the world's fair in a manner worthy of the occasion, and said he felt certain that the friendly relations existing between Germany and the United States would be further strengthened by such an exhibit.

Ex-Congressman Butterworth responded to the remarks of Herr Von Boetticher. He declared that the assent of Germany to take part in the Chicago fair had evoked the greatest satisfaction in the United States. He felt convinced that the exposition would contribute to knit more firmly the ties binding the two countries.

After the interview with Herr Von Boetticher the committee visited Chancellor von Caprivi, who warmly received them.

Subsequently the committee held a conference with Herr Wermuth, the German Imperial Commissioner to the Chicago Fair, in regard to the form of the negotiations to be conducted with German merchants and others whom the committee desire to exhibit at the fair.

AGAINST THE SUB-TREASURY

A Sensation Among Kansas Farmers.

Leaders of the People's Party Openly Repudiate the Pet Scheme of the Western Farmers.

Topska, Kans., August 5.—A sensation has been caused in Alliance circles in this state by the publication of open letters from W. A. Harris and C. W. Shum, prominent leaders in the People's party, protesting against the sub-treasury scheme.

Harris is regarded as the safest leader in the Alliance and would have been elected United States Senator in place of Peffer had he not been a Confederate colonel. Shum was the People's party candidate for Lieutenant Governor last fall. The sub-Alliances throughout Kansas this month will vote on the sub-treasury scheme to decide whether it shall be incorporated in the People's party platform, and the indications now are that it will be defeated.

Frank McGrath, president of the Alliance, who has been warm in its advocacy, has now come out openly against the sub-treasury scheme, and a big fight is looked for when the annual meeting of the Alliance occurs in September.

Col. Harris declared that "after a brilliant victory had been won by the alliance, the so-called sub-treasury scheme was brought forth, a scheme in its essential features modeled after all the most vicious and corrupt practices which we have condemned; patterned after the illegitimate loaning of money by the government to national banks and to railroads and the warehousing and storing of goods for importers and distillers; a scheme to tax the many for the benefit of the few."

He says the substantial business men all over the country have unanimously protested against it, and that it is certain to bring about the complete overthrow of the people's party if it is not at once abandoned.

CAN QUAY ANSWER THIS?

Fifty Thousand Dollars of Campaign Funds in Question.

Richfield Springs, N. Y., Aug. 5.—James J. Coogan, late labor candidate for mayor of the city of New York, denies the story published that Senator Quay gave $50,000 toward his candidacy for mayor in 1888. He says neither Mr. Quay nor any one else contributed a dollar towards his election expenses. He also says that if Mr. Quay succeeded in obtaining from the republican committee $50,000, or any sum, representing that it was to be given to him (Coogan), he certainly obtained the money under false pretences.

TO SUE FOR DAMAGES.

The Wives of the Elliotts Now Going Into Court.

Columbus, Aug. 5.—Another sensational feature of the Elliott murder case is to develop in the courts within the next few days. Mrs. W. J. Elliott, Mrs. Patsy Elliott, and Miss Maroney, the sister-in-law, will institute heavy damage suits against the State Journal company for publishing the issue of the Sunday World which contained one of the articles leading up to the tragedy.

They will base their suits on alleged defamation of character.

The World, at the time of the tragedy, was printed on the Journal presses. Mr. Levering, the editor of the World, gave the Journal an indemnity bond as security for any losses the latter might be caused by the publication.

It develops, however, that the bond was only signed by Levering himself.

Sudden Death.

Passaic, N. J., August 5.—While in the act of taking his seat at the breakfast table with other guests at Mrs. Guthrie's boarding house yesterday morning Wm. P Anderson remarked that the damp weather made him feel dull. He had hardly spoken when he fell off his chair, gasped and died. He was 60 years old. He belonged in Boston and came here a few months ago to manage the Passaic print works.

Chief of the Cherokees.

Talequah, I. T., August 5.—J. B. Mayes were elected chief of the Cherokees on a close vote. It was an orderly election. ROUND THE CORN STALK.

The People's Party Has Rallied in Springfield,

Shouting the War Cry of Down With Sherman.

Preliminary Work Completed Today and Business Ready for the Convention To-morrow.

Springfield, O., Aug. 5.—(Special)—At 2 o'clock this afternoon most of the delegates who are to attend the people's party convention had arrived. The convention was called to order and listened to addresses.

Temporary organization was perfected and an adjournmedt was taken until to-morrow when a state ticket will be placed in the field.

The interest awaked by the convention is very great. Springfield seems determined to deserve well of the new party, for the decorations of the city hall which is to be the gathering place of the convention are exceptionally fine for even such a convention city as Springfield.

The stage is a perfect bower of stalks of corn, sheafs of wheat and other agricultural decorations. The stalks of corn are some of them 11 feet high and come from the farms of Clark county.

The best information is to the effect that there will be county tickets in forty-seven of the eigaty-eight counties of Ohio. The alliance people also talk about electing representatives from eight or nine counties.

The main work of the convention will be accomplished Thursday, when the permanent organization and naming of the candidates will occur.

It is thought that at least 700 delegates will be present. Eva McDonald, the prominent female orator, is billed for an address at the city hall. The fact that it is a party of alleged farmers is emphasized even by the choice of the music which will consist of quartette singing by the sons and daughters of Yellow Springs farmers.

The committees on reception have established headquarters at the Big Four depot and the press at the board of trade rooms.

A number of candidates have been mentioned for the governorship. Hugo Preyer, the well-known Alliance leader, editor of the Plow and Hammer thinks that J. C. Cobb of Wellston has good a chance as anyone.

Hon. John Howell of this city has been mentioned in connection with the position, but he says he is not a candidate. Mr. Howell is part farmer, part banker and a good deal of a money lender. He was once elected a member of the legislature on the republican ticket.

Hugo Preyer, the well-known Alliance leader accorded the press an interesting interview to-day. Mr. Preyer said that the time is ripe for such a movement as that of the alliance. He thinks that voters are likely to be attracted to the new party by the millions as soon as its aims and purposes are understood. He says that there is no slate; that the new party is opposed to slates.

The candidate for governor will likely

DEN OF BRUTALITY.

Soulless Creatures Rule the Helpless Prisoners.

Awful State of Affairs in a Prison.

Convicts Hung Up by the Wrists for Hours.

Roasted Against the Scorching Heaters,

Frozen, Almost Naked, in the Prison Yard, and Driven to Work When Scarcely Able to Walk.

New York, Aug. 5.—An account of an experience as a guard in Clinton prison in Dannemora, N. Y., has appeared in the Sunday Advertiser, written by one of the correspondents of that paper, who had voluntarily assumed a place on the staff of the prison for investigating the condition of things existing there.

Clinton prison is far up in the dense Adirondack forest, so remote from the paths of civilization that the great mass of the people scarcely know of its existence.

According to this account, which appears to be a plain and unvarnished statement of facts which passed before the correspondent's eyes, the prison is a den of brutality of the vilest description, and the men under whose direction the institution is managed are creatures without souls or hearts, utterly devoid of any intelligence except such as might belong to the arch-fiend himself.

The man who is directly responsible for this condition of affairs—the warden of the prison—is Isaiah Fuller, a farmer-politician of Saratoga county, but the man to whose devilish ingenuity and inhumanity the actual deeds of cruelty recorded are attributed is the principal keeper, James Moon, a woodchopper, who belongs in Warren county.

Of the deeds of this creature and his immediate subordinates, who are too desirous of retaining their places to lift a finger to oppose his barbarous practice, the correspondent says

"Moon is the personification of brutality—the worst product of a lumber camp—intemperate, profane, swaggering and ignorant of any of the amenities of civilization. Barbarous atrocities which have resulted in physical disability and insanity of the victim have been charged against him.

"Under his administration convicts have been hung by the wrists in shackles for periods of 12, 24 and 30 consecutive hours; roasted against a laundry heater, frozen, almost naked, in the prison yard; driven to work when scarcely able to walk; worked from daybreak until bed-time; deprived of food and water for four, five and six consecutive days; beaten in the face with fists and on the head with clubs by keepers while hanging defenseless in the shackles; confined in dungeons for weeks on a daily allowance of one ounce of bread and a gill of water; shackled backward to cell doors for long periods; placed in a position of torture daily for weeks; hung by the wrists with slender waxed thread until their terrible agonies ended in unconsciousness."

The industry in which the labor of these convicts is exerted is that of shirtmaking, the weekly product averaging 3,026 dozen, an amount which is understated systematically in the yearly report. The convict shirtmakers work day and night, sixteen hours a day and are obliged to complete seventeen shirts in that time or undergo punishment.

The visible "boss" of this system, says the correspondent, is Louis W. Emerson, state senator from Warren county. He is credited with receiving an enormous profit from the labor of the convicts.

Of the numerous instances of repulsive and barbaric cruelty cases it will suffice to mention one—that, indeed, being almost to sickening to relate, although the mildest of all those described.

It was that of a mere boy, a waif from the streets of New York, named Joe Smith. He was 18 years old, under-sized and slight of build. For no other offence than that of being generally mischievous, this boy was hung up by one wrist to what is known as "Haggerty's Christmas tree," Wednesday evening, January 28.

Haggerty is one of the under keepers and the "Christmas tree" is a long steam pipe from which depend the shackles. These shackles are fixed at such a height from the floor that when clasped on one wrist the toes of the victim just touch the floor.

The correspondent says that Haggerty, while this boy was hanging from the "tree," deliberately forced his cane into the miserable wretch's mouth and pried open his jaws while Moon stood by and laughed at the boy's screams of agony. At length, released from the keeper's grasp and the 'bit' removed from the boy's mouth, his frail body swayed with wagging head and bleeding mouth, until he recovered consciousness.

The 'bit' had been applied to choke the cries, and now, when consciousness returned, the cries were repeated. 'Give it to him in the mouth,' roared the deputy, and Haggerty's big fist struck the boy full in the face.

All the night he was left hanging, and on the afternoon of the next day was marched into a ruined wing of the prison, open to the cold January weather, where he was manacled to a cell door, with his back to it. There he remained until the morning of the next day, when he was at last returned to his cell."

This is but a trifling instance of what is going on in Dannemora or Clinton prison. Insanity was often the result of this treatment, and in taking such cases in hand Moon invariably said: "Well, up with him. Hang him up by the wrists. If he is not crazy we'll soon make him crazy."

And they talk about the czar of Russia and Siberia!

Hunting Up the Taxes.

Tiffin, O., Aug. 5.—Barrack, the Mount Vernon "tax inquisitor," who caused a few Seneca county people to sweat blood some months ago, is again in the city accompanied by a retinue of attorneys. Several wealthy residents of the city have been "interviewed," and considerable of a furore has been created in financial circles by the statement that a demand will be made of the cashiers of the several banks to show up the deposit accounts of certain wealthy patrons. It is stated that all the banks here have consulted attorneys and will resist this demand should it be formally made.

An Ohioan Killed.

Philadelphia, Aug. 5.—Wm. L. Buck, a well known citizen of Delware county, and cashier of the First National bank of Darby, was killed on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad near Collingdale, by being struck by a train while walking on the tracks.

It was at first reported that Mr. Buck had been robbed and murdered by burglars, but as his money and valuables were found on his person, his death is believed to have been accidental.

The murder story is said to have arisen from the finding of a horse and wagon with burglars' tools.

The Belgian Queen.

Brussels, Aug. 5.—The alarm caused by the sudden illness of the queen of the Belgians is abating. A bulletin issued at 8 a. m. announces that there is but little doubt that her majesty will soon recover. Her prostration was due to nervous shock caused by the spectacle presented by the unhappy ex-empress Charlotte, who, when visited by the queen yesterday, was suffering from one of those periodical attacks of violent insanity to which she has been subject since the tragic death of her husband, Emperor Maximilian.

STRANGER THAN FICTION.

Romance of a Man from County Down.

A New Enoch Arden Story of Interest.

James Lennon, Driven from Ireland, Returns to Find the Mother of His Children Another Man's Wife.

New York, August 5.—James Lennon has sailed for Ireland, where he goes to claim his wife, who thinks she is now the wife of another.

He is a man of property and a victim of persecutions brought about by the coercion act. Not so long ago he was a prosperous mill owner in County Down, Ireland, but on account of his patriotism he was compelled at one time to suffer a term of imprisonment.

After his release he became an object of suspicion and his rearrest was finally ordered. To escape this he changed clothes with a friend, one John Leonard, and instructed the latter to inform Mrs. Lennon that her husband was all right, but that he had disappeared through policy and would not write, as letters might lead to his discovery.

Leonard never delivered this message, for the reason that on returning home he either fell or was pushed into a bog with fatal results.

The body was discovered after decomposition had rendered it unrecognizable except from the clothes (which were Lennon's) and papers in the pockets.

The body was buried as that of Lennon, and Leonard's disappearance was accounted for on the ground that he also was an agitator and feared the authorities. Recently the proclamation went forth that all the prosecutions under the crimes act would be dropped and James Lennon immediately returned home. He arrived on a Sunday morning and before reaching his home he saw Wm. Rogers, who had been his foreman, and Mrs. Lennon, walking down the road to church.

He followed them leisurely. The priest's residence was between the little church and Lennon's old home, and as James arrived opposite the priest's house Father Doherty came out on his way to celebrate mass. He saw Lennon, whose funeral sermon he had conducted, and exclaimed: "My God! James Lennon, are you dead or alive?"

"Alive and well, Father Doherty," was the answer.

"Then, James, something more terrible than death has happened."

"Why, what's the matter, Father?"

"Come inside, James, and I'll tell you." The two entered the priest's house. Lennon related the circumstances of his departure and the priest realized how the blunder arose.

Then he startled Lennon by relating that Wm. Rogers, the foreman, had determined to resign unless a share in the mill and the hand if not the heart of Mrs. Lennon be bestowed upon him.

His resignation under the peculiar business circumstances then existing meant ruin for Mrs. Lennon, beggary for herself and children; but as even the priest could not change Rogers' mind, she reluctantly consented, and Rogers took Lennon's place in the management of the mill and home and became the head of the family.

James Lennon sat dazed. Begging the priest not to mention his existence he started for the new world. Here he thought he could forget his sorrow, and if his wife and children were happy all would be well.

On leaving Castle Garden he proceeded on Broadway with no definite purpose. When opposite the Astor house he was accidentally met by John Hughes, a New York box manufacturer who visits Ireland every other summer, and who has spent many pleasant days with Mr. and Mrs. Lennon in county Down.

To Mr. Hughes Lennon told his pitiful story. Mr. Hughes brought him to his home and coaxed him to return to Ireland, sell his property and bring his family to this country and start anew. Lennon took the advice and is now sailing toward his old home.

WHY ANDERSON ESCAPED.

An Indictment Found by the Grand Jury.

Schofield in Washington

Washington, Aug. 5.—Gen. Schofield returned to Washington to-day after an absence of two months spent on his bridal tour.

WOULD NOT BE BRIBED,

Blind George Fetterman and His Organ.

Although Dependent His Soul is Full of Manhood.

Cast Aside by the Great McKinley He Now Rises to Haunt the Dreams of the Soldier Vote Catchers.

Washington, Aug. 5.—The Ohio republican managers are very much exercised over the case of George Fetterman, the blind union soldier of Youngstown, who was sent to Ohio about June 1, with a hand-organ on his back by Mrs. Charlotte Smith, the president of the Woman's Industrial League of the United States, with instructions to grind out to the people of Ohio the pitiful story of Major McKinley's heartless treatment of him when he was here last winter trying to secure a pension.

Mrs. Smith has no political axes to grind in this matter. She is a kind, generous-hearted woman who has given her life to the cause of the working women and suffering humanity.

She became interested in Fetterman's case last winter when the poor man was standing on the street corners trying to sell enough newspapers to keep his sick wife and four children out of the almshouse.

She went to Major McKinley herself and made a personal appeal to him to get through Fetterman's bill, which had been pending for months, but what with turning legally elected Democrats out of their seats and other affairs of state, Mr. McKinley said he was too busy at that time to look after the case of a poor, blind veteran.

He declined even to see Fetterman. Mrs. Smith warned McKinley then that the time might come when he would rue the day he turned his back on George Fetterman.

That day has come. Fetterman's wife was taken to the poorhouse. The child of a union soldier was born in a charity hospital because the leader of the Republican party in the house of representatives was too busy squandering the people's money to push through a bill for the father's relief.

When congress had adjourned Mrs. Smith went to the pension office and forced Gen. Raum to grant Fetterman a pension of $8 a month under the recent disability act. This pittance, however, was not sufficient to keep Fetterman and his family alive, and Mrs. Smith advised him to purchase a hand organ, with which he might be able to gather up on the streets enough money to keep the wolf from the door.

Acting on this suggestion, Fetterman secured a hand organ. The Italians were playing them on every street corner, but when the blind soldier, who had helped fight the battles of his country, sought to make a livelihood in the same way, his hard fate pursued him. Some republican officials took umbrage at the idea of a union soldier soliciting charity in the streets of the national capital in that manner.

They said it did not look well under a republican administration and they induced the authorities to refuse him a license. That refusal practically drove Fetterman out of town.

When Mrs. Smith heard of it she was naturally indignant at the hollow mockery of the republican claim to special friendship for the soldier. She saw that they held out a promise to the ear which was broken to the hope; that as far as the politicians were concerned it was friendship of the lip and not of the heart.

Knowing the history of Fetterman's case as she did she laid the responsibility for its pitiable condition at the door of Major McKinley.

Mrs. Smith, therefore, believed that the soldiers of Ohio whose votes McKinley would solicit should be informed of the treatment one of their comrades had received at his hands and she told Fetterman to go to Ohio and stump the state against McKinley with his hand organ. Fetterman has literally followed her instructions.

He has gone through the northern tier of counties. Everywhere his story has preceded him and his presence has attracted attention. He was at Cleveland during the democratic state convention and the afternoon Plain Dealer arrived he stood out in front of the Hollenden hotel grinding out his feeble welcome as the band played "The Campbells are Coming."

Hundreds of people became interested in Fetterman's case.

Mrs. Smith has received a great many letters from Ohio concerning it—many more than she could answer. Several of the head officers of the G. A. R. who are trying to manipulate the Grand Army in the interest of the republican party, wrote to her asking her to deny the interview with her. To each of these she replied that every word of it was true and that more could be added. She is ready now to make a statement to that effect over her own signature.

The republican managers, and Major McKinley especially, are alarmed at the crusade of the blind soldier and they have sent several confidential agents here to appeal to her to call Fetterman off.

One of them said that this crusade would defeat McKinley if persisted in. Mrs. Smith, however, has steadily refused to interfere. She has no personal interest in the matter except that her sympathies are with Fetterman. She says justice demands that the truth be known and if it defeats McKinley he has only himself to blame.

The major was not slow to appreciate the damage Fetterman might do him and had two interviews with the blind soldier. The account of those interviews is contained in two letters from Fetterman to Mrs. Smith, now in the latter's possession, one of which the correspondent has read. The first one was written from Wellston on July 13, and says that McKinley had sent for him and that he had gone to see him. McKinley was evidently cautious at the first interview, but he gave Fetterman to understand in a roundabout way that if he would drop the interview he, McKinley, would in his turn see that the blind soldier's pension was increased. Fetterman wrote to Mrs. Smith for advice. The latter replied by telling Fetterman that the cause was one of principle. "McKinley's proposition comes too late," she wrote. "Hold the fort," said she, "and all will yet be well."

About a week ago Mrs. Smith received another letter from Fetterman from which it appears that McKinley or McKinley's agents have offered him still larger inducements to abandon his crusade. The letter indicates that Fetterman is sorely tempted. He appeals to Mrs. Smith for advice. He says that he has a hard time making a living on the streets with his organ and if he will make a public denial of the facts in the interview, "they" have agreed to give him as much money as he can make and that McKinley will have his pension increased to $70 a month, the maximum for total blindness.

It seemed like a glorious prospect for a blind man in Fetterman's condition, for it meant ease and comfort for the remainder of his days. Nevertheless Fetterman must have a good deal of manhood about him as he says in his letter that he feels guilty for even considering a proposition to sell out.

He says that he wants advice from the only person who befriended him when he was in sore trouble.

Mrs. Smith said to the correspondent that she had not answered Fetterman's letter. "I don't know what to do about it," said she. "If Fetterman received a pension of $70 a month it would be just what he deserves and is entitled to. He is blind and helpless. McKinley's anxiety to succor Fetterman now is due to selfish motives. Of course, I appreciate that in doing this for Fetterman he is disarming a political antagonist, but my heart goes out to Fetterman, and as he is poor and needy I sometimes feel like writing to him to accept McKinley's proposition and end the matter there. Still, I don't feel like surrendering on account of the principle. I haven't yet decided what to do, nor have I answered Fetterman's letter."

THE STRIKE IS OVER.

Tiffin, Aug. 5.—(Special)—The strike of the shovelers and teamsters on the line of the Washington street improvement was settled to-day in favor of the men.

After the large and enthusiastic meeting of the strikers the contractors became anxious for a settlement and this was reached by conceding the shovelers their demands and compromising with the teamsters for $3 25 per day.

GOSSIP FROM SANDUSKY.

A New Wheel Factory for the City.

Old Soldier Commits Suicide at the Home—Mention of General Interest.

Sandusky, Aug. 5.—(Special)—A new spoke and wheel company will soon be established in this city, the firm to be known as the Woolsey Spoke and Wheel company. The capital stock will be $35,000, and the factory ready for business about the 1st of February. From 100 to 125 sets of wheels per day will be turned out, and employment furnished for 100 men or more. The new works will be independent of any trust, and an attempt will be made to build up as large a business as that of the Woolsey Wheel company during its most prosperous period. Mr. Woolsey, sr., has been in the spoke and wheel business for 30 years, his son, Mr. F. M. Woolsey, having been associated with him since 1870.

The widow of Oscar Crowell of this city commenced suit in the common pleas court Saturday against the United States Mutual Accident association of New York, to recover $5,000 insurance on the life of her late husband, who on March 17, 1891, slipped and fell on Market street in this city and fractured his skull, death resulting immediately thereafter. No part of the money has been paid, and hence Mrs. Crowell began this suit to enforce payment.

It has been decided to hold the Republican senatorial convention in Norwalk September 23, at 11 a. m. The common pleas judicial convention, so sadly, will be held at the same place, on the same day in the afternoon.

The change in the express companies has at last been affected and the business of the Adams Express company has been stopped on the Sandusky branch of the B & Four road and succeeded by the American Express company. Mr. J. T. Clark, superintendent, was in the city Saturday and completed the arrangements of the latter company. There will be no difference except in name, as the office occupied by the Adams company will be used for the American and the present force of employes will be retained.

An old soldier, Joseph Ferguson, at the Soldiers' Home, became tired of life on Monday and committed suicide by hanging himself. He came from Richland county and was an inmate of Cottage I. Ferguson was found in the peach orchard south of the Home, where he had taken his own life.

Politicians of the democratic persuasion are talking a great deal about the recordership, and the friends of Mr. Chas. Traub, the present recorder, are working hard to secure his renomination. Upper Sandusky, O., Aug. 5.—The jury in the trial of Silas Martin, charged with blowing up the house of John Ankney, near Sycamore, on the 29th of March last, with the intention of killing the occupants, John Aukney and wife—Martin's daughter—and Mrs. Martin, his wife, retired at 5 o'clock last evening.

At 6 o'clock they returned a verdict of guilty. As the verdict was read a look of utter despair came upon the face of the defendant and he was led back to jail. The usual notice of a motion for a new trial was given and the motion will be heard on Friday.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Non-Partisan W. C. T. U.

The non-partisan W. C. T. U. will meet Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock with Mrs. S. E. Wilson, 1057 Putnam street. The union has been taking a summer vacation, but will now again commence its meetings.

Will be Met by the O. Y. C.

The Naptha Launch Nellie, belonging to Capt. John Weber, is expected to arrive at Put-in Bay, Friday a. m. The O. Y. C. boys are getting ready to receive her at Turtle Light when she arrives here and will escort her up the river.

The Gas Trustees.

At the meeting of the natural gas trustees this afternoon it was voted to pay R. W. Smith $4,000 on account.

As the BEE goes to press a proposition to allow Parks, Foster & Co. to lay four additional miles of pipe is under consideration, with prospects of adoption.

To Establish a Lien.

Alpha Leist instituted action in the common pleas court to-day against Joseph H. Omo and Arthur A. Omo, to satisfy an execution issued on a judgment of $4,429.33 recovered during the recent term of court.

Death of Arnold McMahan.

Col. Arnold McMahan, an old and respected citizen of Toledo, died last evening. The Colonel was a good soldier during the war, and since its close has been one of East Toledo's most enterprising residents. He will be buried to-morrow afternoon under the auspices of Rubicon lodge of Masons.

The Armour Building.

The BEE last evening made the announcement of the purchase by the Armours of a tract of land for the building of a warehouse for the handling of their meats. The property consists of 60 feet on Erie and 120 feet on Washington street, with right of way to the Clover Leaf tracks. This will prove a valuable addition to Toledo's business enterprises.

Patrolman Howard Arrested and Causes Arrest

Patrolman Howard is in trouble with his tenant, Mrs Selina, of Forrer street, who has had him arrested on a charge of assault and battery.

Howard has had Mrs. Salina arrested on a charge of disturbance, and both cases are the results of a small family row in which it is alleged that Howard attempted to choke Mrs. Selina, who was causing a little disturbance in his house over some actions of the children in the families.

The facts in both cases will come out in the courts this week.

The Rolling Mills Meeting.

The directors of the rolling millls met yesterday afternoon to discuss the situation in which they are involved. Future action by the company depends entirely on the settlement of the fuel question. To carry on their business successfully it will be necessary to have cheap gas. There are a large number of men employed by the concern, and it is hoped satisfactory terms can be made with the gas trustees for a continuance of their contract. There is no desire to shut down, but it will be impossible to continue unless favorable rates are secured.

$200,000 a Day.

As an illustration of the activity of the grain movement, it may be stated that Toledo banks, on an average at the present time, are paying out $200,000 per day. This looks like old times. The importance of Toledo as a grain center was never more visible than at present. While this is a heavy drain on the city's banking institutions, it is a source of pleasure to note that by their careful business methods the large amount of money is paid without crippling them, although it has a tendency to make the market rather tight.

The Fruit at Catawba Island.

Growers at Catawba island say that the fruit prospects were never better than they are at the present time. Peach trees are loaded down and the older pear trees are burdened. Plum and quince trees have only a moderate crop, but the fruit is nice. Apples are particularly about Gypsum, are loaded with fruit, and there is promise of a good crop on all trees on the island and the main land. Concord, Catawba and Delaware grapes promise a full crop. The last of June the Catawba and Concord were slightly affected by blight. The vines are healthy and free from leaf blight.—Fremont News.

Mayor Emmick in More Trouble.

Mayor Emmick is home again from Detroit, and is in a peck of trouble. By some evident preconcerted movement, about a dozen men have been watching in the corridors of the city building for his coming. It seems from their statements that all of them were promised, during the Spring campaign, with elegant situations as bridge tenders, etc. The season is well advanced, and the promises have failed to materialize into actuality. Hence the anxiety to see the Mayor. Capt. Skeldon is harbor master and has the disposition of the places at his command, and there are no vacancies. How his honor will extricate himself from his new predicament remains to be seen.

The First Artillery's Encampment

The First regiment, light artillery, O. N. G., of Ohio, will go into camp to-morrow at McConnelsville, O., a well selected site on the Muskingum river, 25 miles south of Zanesville. Battery D, of this city, consisting of 60 men, with Capt. Geo. Reulet commanding, will leave in the morning on the Norwalk division of the Lake Shore for Monroeville, change cars to the Baltimore & Ohio and proceed to their destination, at which they will arrive about 4 p. m. An advance squad of eight men with guns and equipments left Tuesday evening and will have everything in shape for the men to go into camp. They will remain six days, and during the time the boys expect to have a great jollification.

Keep an Eye on Him.

The following from the Cleveland Plain Dealer will show the "high-toned" canvass which is to be made by the republican state committee in Ohio this year:

An employe of the republican state central committee has been in the city during the past few days striving to stir up a revolt among the railroad men employed in the various yards in the city against Gov. Campbell. His tricks and methods were exposed yesterday to a reporter as follows:

The man left Canton, August 1, under orders and under pay from the central committee. His mission is to go among the railroad men with a view of seeking to convince them that there is a law requiring the employment of one brakeman for every 10 cars used on the road. The point which he endeavors to make is that the law is not enforced by the governor. As a matter of fact, the law on this point provides that each train should be provided with two brakemen. No complaint has ever been made that Gov. Campbell has been negligent in securing the enforcement of such legislation as already exists in this state. The bireling left for Toledo to work that town late Sunday evening.

Humane Society Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Humane society was held last evening with President J. M. Brown in the chair. The attendance was not large, and among the absentees was Secretary Richardson.

The summary of Agent France's report for the month of July is as follows: Relief furnished 1; cruelty and neglect to children 21; cruelty and neglect to wife and family 16; investigation for cruelty and neglect to children not sustained 8; investigation for cruelty to wife and family 3; admonitions for cruelty and neglect to children 8; admonition for cruelty to wife and family 1; convictions for cruelty to wife and family 4; abuse to animals 11; over loading animals 2; lame animals 6; horses shot 3; horses laid up 8; dogs shot 1; cows shot 1; number of children who have come under our care 112; whole number of cases 700.

Several cases that need attention were discussed, and Agent France will look them up.

The matter of funds for the society was considered, and it was decided to send out circulars soliciting aid from those interested in the work.

Another topic discussed was a report made by Mrs. Segur on the ladies' visiting committee to the Lucas County Children's Home. She stated that the law required them to be members of the Humane society. President Brown was of the same opinion that the committee should be appointed from the society. No action was taken.

DROPPED DEAD.

The Fate of a Veteran Returning Home

From the Detroit Encampment—An Inmate of the Soldiers' Home at Dayton.

John R. Hall, aged about 60 or 65, and an inmate of the National Soldiers' Home at Dayton, Ohio, dropped dead on a Michigan Central passenger train at 10:30 this morning, just before it arrived in this city.

Coroner Roulet was notified and the body was removed to Bennett's undertaking establishment.

Col. W. J. White, of Old Guard post, No. 23, G. A. R., of Dayton, accompanied the body to the undertaker's.

Hall has on the regulation uniform of the Soldiers' home. From Col. White

THE DEAD VETERAN.

these particulars were learned. He accompanied Old Guard post No. 23, of that city, to Detroit. As he is quite old he did not take part in the parade yesterday, but did not complain of feeling ill; in fact, he was in the best of spirits all day. He slept with the rest of the boys in their quarters, and this morning he ate a hearty breakfast, after which he enjoyed several pipes of tobacco. He was on his way home when, without any warning whatever, he fell over dead. His body was at once removed to the baggage car, until they reached this city.

Apoplexy was the cause of his death. Mr. Hall had the appearance of being in best of health, was large and strongly built.

Undertaker Bennett placed the body in a plain coffin and Mr. White will take the remains to Dayton this afternoon.

Where the man formerly resided or who his relatives were Mr. White could not say, as Mr. Hall's history was unknown to him.

Mr. Hall had on his person an open faced nickle watch, a pair of eye glasses, $3 86 in money and an excursion ticket from Dayton to Detroit and return. He wore a heavy pair of boots and walked with a cane.

Division of Damages.

A Chicago paper comments thus on the recent Marion-Armour decision:

"General protests against the practices of United States courts in dividing damages in collision cases followed the decision of Judge Jenkins, of Milwaukee, in the Armour-Marion suit. Following as it did a large number of similar decisions, Chicago vessel men said it was scarcely possible that in all these cases both boats could be equally at fault. They held that the judges were quite too willing to escape responsibility and to take an easy way to decide troublesome questions. All this is said to have resulted from a lack of maritime knowledge on the part of the judges. In the Armour-Marion case it cuts no great figure whether the damages were divided or not, so long as the Marion was found to have been at fault. The half of the assessed damages of $137,000 exceeds her appraised value of $49,000."

Freight Handlers' Wages Raised.

For some time past the freight handlers, unloading the boats of the Clover Leaf line at this port, have been receiving 25 cents per hour for their work. Of late some dissatisfaction has been evident and yesterday a committee of three called upon Mr. M. C. Sullivan, the contractor for handling the freight, and on behalf of the men made a formal demand for an advance in wages to 30 cents per hour. Mr. Sullivan received the men courteously and after a brief discussion of the matter, granted the advance. There are about sixty freight handlers on the Clover Leaf docks affected by this raise.

Mr. Sullivan appreciated the demands of the men and considers the advance as but fair to them. His prompt action in the matter averted a strike that might have proven serious.

Schooner Parker Aground.

The big schooner B. W. Parker, loaded with coal, was grounded by the tug Schenck on the turn at Turtle light Monday night. She went on hard, and the big tug was unable to release her all day yesterday.

Will Run to Perrysburg.

It has been decided that the passenger steamer Wellington R. Burt, now lying at the Hocking dock, will run on the up river route between Toledo and Perrysburg, possibly also to Maumee. The inspectors will be here to-day to look her over and as soon as her new papers are ready, probably next Saturday.

FAMILY REUNION

Way Down in Maine, in Which Toledoans are Interested.

One of the most numerous families in Piscataquis county is that of the Packards, who early settled in and about Blanchard. A few days ago a western cousin and family came to Blanchard to pay their first visit to Piscataquis cousins, and in honor of the event and that they might have the privilege of meeting all their cousins, a family picnic was arranged and held on the grounds of Chas B Packard at Blanchard, last Monday. The occasion was a merry and exceedingly felicitous one, every one of the 55 persons present save one, being a relative by descent or by law. Among those present were Mr and Mrs E J Tippett and two children, of Toledo, O., Mr and Mrs Chas B Packard and son, Sumner Packard, wife and child, Mr and Mrs Frank Johnson, Mr and Mrs Chas Barnes and child, Hon Cyrus A Packard and wife, Edmond B Packard, Mr and Mrs Chas E Packard and two children, Mr and Mrs Ruel Packard and three children, "Uncle Jacob" Blanchard, Mr and Mrs Warren Chamberlain and two children, Mr and Mrs Willard Gammon and three children, Mr and Mrs Jno Patton, Mrs Edward Blanchard and three children, Mr and Mrs A D Sturtevant, Carroll Sturtevant, Mr and Mrs Joseph Packard, Rufus Packard, Mr and Mrs Martin Gilman, daughter and granddaughter, the latter two of Boston, Miss Florence Maxim, of South Paris, Me, and Rev Norman McKinnon.

Besides those present there were detained of those in whose veins flow Packard blood, and, who live at and near Blanchard, some sixteen others, showing how numerous are the members of this old family in Piscataquis. The event was a pleasant one and was highly enjoyed by the "Ohio cousins," who express great pleasure at the cordial entertainment accorded them in the rock-bound and beautiful valley of Blanchard.—Piscataquis Observer.

LIVELY, BUT CAREFUL,

Was the Movement at the Union Depot

Of the Throngs Which Went to Detroit Through Toledo—Other Matters of Interest in the Railroad Line.

The manner in which the immense crowds which have thronged the Union depot almost constantly since the G. A. R reunion opened at Detroit, have been taken care of reflects great credit on the management of that institution. The average observer does not realize the responsibility resting on the officials in charge at this point. Every day during the week a train has left for Detroit every 20 minutes, and not a single accident has been recorded. Assistant Superintendent Canniff, of the Lake Shore, is unstinted in his praise of Toledo as a railroad center and the judicial maneuvering of a big crowd of people. He said that the manner in which the trains were moved about, at the union depot August 3d, during the great rush, was the finest piece of railroading he had ever had the pleasure to witness.

East Bound Tonnage.

The total tonnage by rail from Chicago last week was 44,614, against 46,384 tons the previous week and 56,921 tones for the corresponding week last year. The total lake tonnage was 82,601, against 78,752 tons the previous week. Following are the proportions carried by the eastern lines:

Roads—	Tons.	Per Ct's.
Michigan Central	6,560	14.6
Wabash	3,160	7.0
Lake Shore	5,449	13.1
Fort Wayne	6,345	14.0
Erie Handling	5,234	11.7
Baltimore & Ohio	3,066	6.9
Grand Trunk	4,767	10.7
Nickle Plate	5,016	11.2
Chicago & Erie	4,782	10.7
Total	44,614	100.0

TO BUILD A SHIP RAILWAY.

A Chicago Man With Millions and a Scheme.

Registered at the Boody yesterday was Mr. T. Burnham, wife and son, of Chicago. Mr. Burnham is a retired lawyer with large means, and is devoting himself to booming a ship railway between Chicago and Toledo.

He is a warm friend of the scheme, and is fortified with figures galore to prove that the project is the greatest thing on earth.

He was in consultation with several Toledo people, but judging from the following he did not get much encouragement.

C. A. King, when seen by a Bee this morning said that he had been approached on the subject by Burnham, but did not think the project was a feasible one.

D. B. Smith told a Bee that the gentleman had called on him, but that he could not see any chance for profit in the enterprise. Freights were too cheap and waterways too accessible to warrant the spending of such a vast sum as a ship railroad between the two places would cost.

FOR THE FARMERS.

Organization of an Insurance Company in Their Interest.

The steps have been taken for the organization of a strong company, whose principal business will be done with the farmers. It is named the Lucas County Farmers' Mutual Fire and Lightning Insurance company. The directors elected are John E. Taylor, M. P. Sanderson, L. O. Gibbs, Elias L. Patton, George A. Woodward. The officers are:

President—Elias L. Patton.
Secretary—George A. Woodward.
Adjutant—D. O. Washburn.

The capital stock has been fixed at $100,000, the general office being with the secretary at Richfield, the annual meeting to be held at Toledo. The company starts under the most favorable auspices, having already obtained more than $100,000 in risks, and will undoubtedly be successful.

The market quotations in the BEE are compiled from United Press special dispatches and from reports received by the Toledo Produce Exchange, and specially arranged by Mr. Denison B. Smith, secretary of the Exchange.

OFFICE OF THE TOLEDO BEE, }
TOLEDO, O., Aug. 5. }

London wheat and corn markets quiet and steady. French country markets firm. Liverpool wheat firm at ½ pence advance of yesterday. Corn cheaper.

The receipts of wheat at seven principal western points to-day are 1,037,235 bu, compared with 370,275 bu on the same day last year.

The imports into the United kingdom for the week were 1,576,000 bu of wheat and 110,000 bbls of flour, equal to 2,071,000 bu of wheat and 1,190,000 bu of corn.

The quantity of flour and wheat on ocean passage increased last week 128,000 bu. Corn decreased 872,000 bu.

Our table herein of available wheat and corn shows an increase of 2,795,000 bu wheat, and an increase of 34,500 bu corn.

Chicago "Bulletin."

Quantity of wheat on passage to France July 23, reported at 10,928,000 bush, against 2,800,000 bushels one year previous.

Quantity of wheat on passage to Antwerp, July 23, reported at 3,600,000 bushels, against 800,000 bushels one year previous.

The ship Shenadoah cleared from San Francisco on Saturday for Havre with the largest cargo of wheat on record—186,000 bushels.

Car Famine.—St. Louis claims that a car famine is imminent. The railroad companies are doing all that is possible, and empty cars are on their way from the east and south, which will give some relief. It may be excellent management for railways to send cars east for a cheap haul and have them returned empty but more net money can be made by keeping the cars for the home business, where they can be unloaded at terminal points promptly, ready for a new trip.

Freight Rates at Chicago.

Chicago Tribune: The Western Transportation company (New York Central line) gave notice of the following advances in lake and rail rates, taking effect Aug. 12: To New England—corn, 10c per bu; oats, 7c per bu. To New York—wheat, 10c per bu; corn, 8½c. This is the third advance in rates to New England before the first one went into effect August 1. Each has been ½c per bu. The rise in the rate to New York, however, was the most radical, as but 5½c was paid yesterday. Such a jump is almost without precedent in the lake and rail business. Other lake and rail lines will probably follow with similar advances to-day.

Scarce at Chicago.

The Tribune says: No one knows the extent of the short interest in lake freights, and any prediction as to the future of Buffalo rates would be mere guess work without that knowledge. It is certain that a considerable amount of wheat sold for shipment in the first half of August is still to go forward.

Also as follows: The engagements for export yesterday were reported all the way from 50 to 70 loads, of which 10 were said to be for Norway, which usually draws on Russia for its supplies.

A San Francisco press report estimates the wheat crop at 50,000,000 bu. It is just as easy for a press reporter to call it 50,000,000 as 40,000,000, and that is about all the dispatch is worth.

The receipts of wheat to-day at seven principal western points are 666,960 bu in excess of the corresponding Wednesday in 1890.

The export clearances yesterday from four Atlantic ports were very light in wheat, flour and corn. Except from Baltimore 300,000 bu wheat and 13,000 bu of flour.

English markets for grain as reported herein are steady at the advance of yesterday. Weather improving.

Bradstreet's report of the supply of grain makes wheat increased 2,900,000 bu; corn, 903,000 bu; oats, 121,000 bu. Pacific coast decreased 562,000 bu, owing to exports of over 800,000 bu from San Francisco to Havre.

Continental Supplies.

For the first time in the history of statistics of the movement the ocean passage table herein gives the continent 1,560,000 bu more wheat than to the united kingdom.

Russia.

The press report says that the Russian government has interdicted all speculative transactions in breadstuffs, and is considering the interdiction of exports.

Chicago Lake and Rail Rates.

In another place herein it is stated that the New York Central line propellers lake and rail to New York from Chicago has advanced the rate on wheat to 10c per bushel.

The fine hand of the L S & M S and N Y Central railway managers are quite visible therein. Rates by the southern lines of railway up to Clyde, Sandusky and Cleveland and thence to New York are undisturbed. The lake marvels cannot stand such management. It was always thus. The trunk lines always work to prevent the grain from coming to the lake markets.

English Supplies.

The Mark Lane Express, printed herein yesterday says the English supply of home grown wheat is greatly exhausted.

Beerbohn's Quotations.

In our report of English markets herein Beerbohn quotes California wheat for prompt shipment at 42s 6d, and No. 2 red wheat for same shipment at 38s. That is a difference of about 12c per bu. What does it mean. The No. 2 winter wheat of this crop will weigh on an average of 60 pounds. Of course the California is old wheat, but there is no such difference in value.

The grain markets of this country have been weak and uninteresting to-day and prices are lower all around. There are no new factors of prices in the deal save what are herein noted. Private cables close English markets steady. Wheat and corn close lower east and west.

In New York August closed at 87⅞c, a loss of 1⅛c; September at 87¼c, a loss of 1⅛c. August corn at 67½c, a loss of 1c; September at 65½c, a loss of 1c.

In Chicago August wheat closed at 87½c, a loss of 1c; September at 87⅜c, a loss of ⅝c. August corn at 58c, a loss of ⅜c, September at 50½c, a loss of ⅜c.

In Toledo.

There has been a little less activity than yesterday in trading in wheat futures, but there has been a fair amount of business. Prices have been weak and average lower, closing 1⅜@1½ below yesterday. On the call August wheat sold at 91½c; Sept. at 91¾c and Dec. at 94c. After the call August sold at 91¼@90¾c and closed at 90¾c, a loss of 1⅜c. Sept. sold at 91@90¾c and closed at 90¾c, a loss of 1⅜c; Dec. sold at 93¾@93¼c and closed at 93¼c, a loss of 1¼c.

Cash wheat continued in good request with large sales, but at lower prices. No. 2 soft opened at 91¾ and sold down to 91c, a loss of 1c; No. 3 soft at 90¾@90½; No. 4 soft at 88c; rejected No. 1 at 87c. Wheat and rye at 85c. No. 1 white at 92c.

Corn—A little more active; No 2 at 65c, No 3 at 63, No 4 at 61c. No 2 yellow at 65½c, No 3 yellow at 64½c. Oats—No. 2 at 38c, No 3 at 28c; No 2 white sellers at 34½c, and buyers at 34c. To arrive 32c. Rye—Good demand; No 2 at 76½c; August at 76½@76¾c; No 3 at 74c.

Freights.

Lake freights to Buffalo, Wheat 2c Corn, c Lake and rail rate to New York 7½c wheat, 7½c corn. Boston, 10½c wheat, 8½c corn; Philadelphia, 6½c wheat, 6½c corn; Baltimore, 6½c wheat, 6½c corn.

Gov. Pattison has taken hold of the investigation of the Keystone swindle, and it begins to look as though the mud would yet be stirred to the bottom.

The "Home Fascinator Company" will fascinate no more victims. The Bee has warned its readers against this and similar swindling schemes more than once. Once for all, it is wisdom to act on the principle that no business firm is established to give away something for nothing, and the firm that advertises so to do is a fraud and will rob those who take any chances based on its lying promises.

Baron Hirsh tells an interviewer that he is ready to continue his liberal work for his race as fast as opportunity offers, that it is all for the one use, and he believes he can handle it to better advantage than could his executors after his death. The measure of his wealth is still some $40,000,000, and all the world, outside of Russia, will hope he may live to carry out his benevolent and sensible intentions.

It should not be matter of surprise that leaders in the people's party movement are beginning to repudiate the subtreasury and the landloan planks. Expressionists forced these issues on conventions which were not sufficiently deliberative. The sober sense of the people rejects them. That is all the story, and it makes the outlook for the alliance and for the people's movement all the more hopeful that this is so.

Some manufacturer has advertised his business by sending Major McKinley a pair of carriage lamps made of American tin. In his canvass of a state where the majority of the voters belong to the wage-earning class, the major will do well not to drive about in that carriage unless he wants to be ditched. Of all bubbles that ever burst never one melted into nothingness more absolutely than the promises to labor in connection with the tin tariff.

The Swiss are having an all-week celebration, but this is quite worth while as it commemorates a six hundredth anniversary. The league formed in the valley of Uri, on August 1, 1291, was the basis of the confederation which has ever since been able to preserve the integrity and independence of the Swiss government in the midst of embellishments and wars that have over and over again shaken the countries of Europe, hurled dynasties into oblivion and changed the boundaries of kingdoms.

A blind union soldier with his wife in the poorhouse and their child born in a charity hospital, an Ohio soldier, too, and Congressman McKinley "too busy" to see him, or to listen to his story, or to institute an investigation as to why the man's claim for a pension was not attended to. This was a picture of misfortune in Washington last year. The same blind soldier, armed with a hand organ charity has bought him, traveling from town to town in Ohio and grinding out the tune "The Campbells are coming." This is a picture of retribution this year.

The New York custom-house war will be carried into the camp of the Grand Army of the Republic. A clause of the civil service reform law provides that preference in employment and in retention in employment over civilians shall be given "veteran soldiers and sailors who have been honorably discharged from the military or naval service of the United States." Of the eighty-six men removed "for economy's sake" from the New York custom house forty-one were veterans belonging to the G. A. R. At first the indignation of the Brooklyn and New York posts to which these men belong was directed against Collector Erhardt, who is himself a veteran of the war and a G. A. R. man. Mr. Erhardt had no trouble in showing that he was powerless in the matter, and was a victim as well, and his resignation confirmed his statements. Now the post guns are trained on Secretary Foster. Members of these posts who are delegates to the encampment at Detroit are instructed to bring before that convention this discrimination against the former comrades-in-arms, and to demand an expression thereon. If their voices are not smothered the secretary will hear something more not to his advantage. Poor Foster! He has had a hard row to hoe so far, and the end is not yet.

WHO'S GOT THE BUTTON?

The American manufacturers of pearl buttons have a monopoly of the American market, thanks to the McKinley tariff. A Mr. Maitland, one of the fortunate ones engaged in this business, recently inscribed his name on a hotel register in Chicago, with the following as his occupation: "New Pearl Button Industry." He told a reporter how prosperous his business is now, and the reason therefor: "We get higher prices, because that is what the tariff is for."

Incidentally Mr. Maitland, who appears to have been somewhat garrulous as a conversationalist, let out a trade secret which shows how little the pearl button manufacturers needed protection. "We have a machine to make the button," he told a Times reporter. "It was invented by a man of the name of Campbell, and it simply talks." In these days of wonders in the way of improved machinery, the owner of a machine which gets this high praise has an invention that turns out a great amount of work, and needs little guidance. When a boy or girl can run it, and its product displaces the labor of many men, then it is said of a machine, "It simply talks."

Having this improved machine Mr. Maitland or the pearl button industry could have made money and sold buttons cheaper than ever. Having the tariff to put an artificial price on the buttons it was not necessary to sell them cheaply. This price could be raised, and it has been raised.

Thus the manufacturer makes his double profit. Cost of production has decreased "by the man of the name of Campbell's" machine "that talks" the buttons right out. There are no buttons to be bought except those made by the home industry, and the price set upon them is determined only by the greed of the maker. The consumer can pay this price, or go without pearl buttons. "Because that is what the tariff is for."

The sense of culture in Col. Elijah Halford is disturbed because "not one person in ten" in writing to the president of the United States knows how to address him properly. Let the secretary possess his soul in patience until March, 1893, then he can set up a school of instruction in the art of letter writing. Meantime, the people in the United States will teach him something.

The Philadelphia Press calls on Illinois to bury ex-Senator Farwell out of sight, because he continues to express his dislike and contempt for President Harrison. But if all republicans who share the ex-senator's opinions are treated that way, who will be left to vote the republican ticket at the next election?

The New York Evening Telegram uses the word "electrocussion." Can any one see where this is an improvement over "electrocution," except that it gives the American another opportunity to indulge in a "cuss" word?

If rain-maker Melbourne will bring his machine to the Maumee, and cause the clouds to lay the dust in the streets of Toledo he will receive the thanks of a dusty public.

President Hayes.

That excellent gentleman, ex-President Hayes, has a pleasant word to say apropos of ex-President Cleveland's Sandwich speech. It refers to the latter's talk about the duties and privileges of ex-presidents. Ex-President Hayes is himself an example of a man bearing himself modestly and becomingly in the years that followed his leaving office, and when the full truth is told it will appear that he has left a most exemplary record in all phases of his career. He was not a sensational president, but he was a judicious and patriotic one, and the era of his administration was the most important since the days of the war. The south then set its face toward the future, and has steadily advanced in prosperity from that time onward. An important aid to her to such an end was the sound policy established by President Hayes.—Boston Herald.

Blaine and Harrison

The cheers that reach the ears of President Harrison whenever the name of Secretary Blaine is mentioned in republican speeches, compared with the trifling echoes that follow the utterances of his own name, cannot be very convolence to his hopes of a second term.—N. Y. Daily News.

Sly Uncle Jerry.

It is growing more and more evident that Uncle Jerry Rush is working his weather bureau in the interest of his presidential candidacy. A man would be an ingrate to vote for anyone except Uncle Jerry after a month of such weather as this is.—Minneapolis Tribune.

No Peanut Politics.

It is interesting to observe that ex-President Hayes indorses ex-President Cleveland's remarks on the question as to the duties and privileges of ex-presidents as altogether sensible and judicious. There is no peanut politics about ex-President Hayes.—Boston Herald.

Former Testimony.

Between the necessity of leaning upon silver during the scarcity of gold and the duty of crying down for political effect the Republican gold organs are very uncomfortable just now. Read the former testimonies of your Republican statesmen, good neighbors, for consolation.—Boston Globe.

Great Object Lesson.

The campaign of education on tariff reform received a great object lesson in Ohio yesterday when a farmer stood all day in the market town with his load of wool, unable to sell it even at 10 cents a pound less than last year's price.—N. Y. World.

Slandering the Farmer.

The Ohio farmer is recommended to study this McKinley diagram of the wool situation: The McKinley tariff would have put up the price of wool had not the general dishonesty of the Ohio farmer forced it down!—Massillonian.

Flag still Flying.

By the dawn's early light, this morning, you can very easily see that the flag is still flying in Kentucky, with no kansas vepper (with a "ff") in the eyes of the Kentucky Democracy.—St. Louis Republic.

More Pleasing.

"Raum's resignation would have a pleasing alliterative sound," remarks the Courier. "Raum kicked out" wouldn't be alliterative but it would be even more pleasing.—Buffalo News.

May as Well Quit.

If Mr. McKinley relies on democratic disaffection for success, he may as well quit the canvass. He will encounter the democracy in solid column. — Findlay Courier.

Stands Alone.

Major McKinley says he will not be a candidate for senator in any event. In this respect he seems to stand alone among the Ohio republicans.—Chicago Times.

Italy and the Exposition.

Italy will not send any exhibits to the world's fair. What she will send will be a lot of Italians to sell peanuts and bananas. —Syracuse Herald.

They Will Both Hold On.

Secretary Noble still says that he desires to resign. Unfortunately, no such Noble sentiment animates Raum.—Chicago Herald.

PLEADING TO SEE HER SON,

Natalie Appeals to the Russian Czar.

He is Powerless, Under the Circumstances to Render Her Any Aid.

London, August 5.—King Alexander, of Servia, arrived at St. Petersburg yesterday on a visit to the imperial family. The czar and several of the Russian grand dukes received him at the railway station, and he was tendered all the honors due a reigning sovereign.

Queen Natalie is making things very disagreeable during the visit of her son. She has made a frantic and pitiful appeal to the czar and czarina for permission to see her child, as she calls him.

"In the name of the most merciful God," she has written, "I implore you to have pity on a mother so sorely tried, and to permit me, poor, miserable woman, to clasp my son to my bosom."

She begs the czar, as her son's godfather, to order him to see his mother. The czar is, of course, powerless to interfere, even by suggesting, as King Alexander is in the care and custody of the chief regent, M. Ristitch, who accompanies him.

THEIR WORK IS OVER.

The State Board Has Decreased the Duplicate.

Falling Off in Farm Values the Cause.

Forty Thousand Dollars Less of Taxable Property Than the Auditors Returned — Warren Still Without His Seat.

Columbus, Aug. 5.—The decennial state board of equalization is ready to adjourn. In the work of equalizing the valuations of real property throughout the state, only two counties—Coshocton and Henry—have escaped change. All the counties containing large cities, with the exception of Montgomery, have had their tax duplicates increased, while the rural counties, with their farm lands, have been reduced in valuations.

Cuyahoga county is the greatest sufferer by the spirit of increasing city valuations, the total net additions to its valuations being $22,345,646, making a grand duplicate for the county of $114,077,902.

Hamilton county's net addition to its valuations is $15,238,208, making a grand county duplicate there of $108,162,623.

Lucas county was made to suffer also.

Despite the heavy increase of city valuations the grand duplicate of the State, as equalized by the board, is $40,401 less than it was as returned by the county boards of equalization.

This is due to the enormous aggregate decrease in the valuation of farm lands. As returned by the County Boards of Equalization the grand duplicate of the State was $1,266,346,089. The total additions were $53,059,546, and the total deductions $53,100,747, making a net deduction of $40,401.

The grand duplicate of the State, as fixed by the board is, therefore, $1,266,305,698. The board might make some changes, but it could not make changes in individual counties.

All alterations must be horizontal, and suggestions have been made of a horizontal reduction before the report is finally acted upon. One proposition was to make a horizontal cut of 10 per cent., another of 5 per cent., another a compromise of 7 per cent.

Under the law, however, the board cannot make a material reduction of the grand duplicate. Litterally, the duplicate must be unchanged, a reduction in one locality being compensated by the addition elsewhere, but the board is allowed a little latitude, and is not held down to the places for mills and tens.

The present reduction is about all, however, that the law would stand, according to the construction placed on it, and a further change is improbable. If one is made, however, it will as has been said, be horizontal. Added is a tabular statement of the actions of the board. It is official and is now published for the first time:

THE OHIO CAMPAIGN.

The democratic prospects in Ohio are apparently growing brighter every day.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Mr. McKinley will no doubt properly denounce those manufacturers who promptly close their factories when their employes ask for increased wages.—Courier Journal.

The fat fryers are already at work collecting money for McKinley from the Pennsylvania manufacturers, who, as a republican Senator wrote to Foster, "receive the chief benefits of our tariff system."—New York World.

Mr. McKinley's confidence in his own election is serene and satisfying. He is the most confident man who ever ran for office in a close state. Mr. McKinley has proved himself an enthusiast on tariff lines, and it is altogether possible that he is about to repeat the role.—St. Louis Republic.

INDIANA.

William Duvall suicided at Shelbyville.

Heavy rains reported from all over the State.

Allen Slautz an old man hung himself at Anderson.

Emery Spore was killed by the cars at Crawfordsville.

Colored people celebrated emancipation proclamation at Warsaw.

The total value of the assessment of taxable property in Dubois county, exclusive of railroads, is $4,739,860, against 1890 of $5,372,500. Increased by board of review, $,991,855; decreased, $130,055.

Anderson ministers are waging warfare against spiritualism, and denunciations of the doctrine were hurled from every pulpit in the city Sunday. The Rev. Hunter McDonald, a Christian minister of Middleton, has challenged Mrs. Luther, the Nestor of spiritualism in Indiana, to a joint debate. Mrs. Luther has accepted, and the debate will occur at the spiritual camp meeting grounds near Chesterfield next Saturday. The question will be, "That the so-called teachings of Jesus Christ as contained in the new testament scripture, King James' version, are immoral in their tendencies." Mrs. Luther will affirm the above and the Rev. Mr. McDonald will deny.

GENERAL LABOR NEWS.

Strike on the Docks—Preparations for Labor Day—Iron Workers Strike.

Trouble has been brewing among the longshoremen for some time. The prompt compliance of Contractor Mike Sullivan, of the Clover Leaf, for an increase of five cents an hour has averted what might have been a serious strike.

At the meeting of the Barbers' Union last evening Thomas Burton was declared state organizer. The appointment was made by the President of the International Association. The barbers will be out in force on labor day.

Painters' union No. 7 last evening discussed the trouble existing between the bosses and the men anent the newly organized union of journeymen. It was decided to turn out in a body on Labor Day.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 5.—The situation here remains about the same. The Republican Printing company, the largest job office, has replaced its employes with non-union men.

The hod carriers organized a union this morning and will demand $1.80 for eight hours's work. Mayor Cusing issued a proclamation this morning commanding all crowds to disperse and keep off the streets and calling on law-abiding citizens to hold themselves ready to aid in case of an emergency. The Bohemian smelter strikers are becoming ugly and trouble is feared. Among them are several ex-Chicago anarchists.

Connellsville, Pa., Aug. 5.—Mine Inspector Duncan and Coroner Holbert are exploring Rainey's Grace mines. Last February, at the beginning of the great coke strike this mine was set on fire and three Polanders who were repairing the tracks, lost their lives in the mine. Their decomposed bodies were found last evening. Three of the strikers are suspected of having first killed the Poles and then setting fire to the mine to conceal their crime. The company is proceeding under this supposition and sensational developments are promised at the coroner's inquest.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 4.—The strike of the 400 members of the Amalgamated association at the Vesuvius iron works of Morehead & Co., Sharpsburg, Pa., at first insignificant, is fast developing into a contest equal in importance with any in the history of the organization. About 40 non-union workmen are working in the plate mill to-day. So far the strikers have shown no hostile feeling. Every precaution is being exercised by the firm to prevent the workmen from communicating with the strikers. Deputy sheriffs are guarding the mill property. The statements concerning the quantity and quality of work done are conflicting.

Yesterday the committee of the Central Labor Union on Labor Day met and discussed matters pertaining to the parade and picnic. Invitations have been issued to all the labor organizations in Northwestern Ohio.

St. Louis, Aug. 4.—The National Journeymen Tailors' union met yesterday. Mr. Fred Jensen, of New York, was elected permanent chairman, August Werdes assistant secretary and Louis Radmacher sergeant-at-arms. After permanent organization was effected the regular committees were appointed and the subject of "back shop" charges was taken up and the discussion lasted throughout the morning session.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 5.—The engineers on the "L" road, who were discharged a week ago last Sunday, are on their engines to-day, running regularly on the road. They are working at a rate of $2.70a day and not by the hour. The settlement is exactly on the terms proposed by Chief Arthur, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive engineers.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 5.—The general state assembly Knights of Labor was in session with closed doors yesterday afternoon and evening with 200 delegates present, representing 100 assemblies throughout the state. The one point of importance was action on the recent greeting sent to the general secretary and treasurer of the order at Philadelphia by which the assembly was earnestly requested to take independent political action. There was to have been an effort made to induce the assembly to indorse the people's party platform, but the forces were routed by the sudden appearance of John Devlin, of Detroit, member of the general executive committee of the order in the United States. It is doubtful if the effort would have been successful anyway, as Master Workman Henry I. Allen, of Schoolcraft, was heartily adverse to such radical measures, and had in a measure prepared to fight the move. In lieu of such action the assembly adopted a resolution indorsing the action of all industrial councils or conventions that have inaugurated work looking to a consolidation of all industrial people at the ballot box, trusting that this great movement of industrial consolidation may culminate in the full emancipation of the masses from industrial slavery. Following this a greeting was extended to the Farmers' alliance, the Patrons of Husbandry, the Patrons of Industry, the Citizens' alliance, and the National Citizens' Industrial alliance, promising support in all wise directed efforts for the advance of the cause of industrial reform. Master Workman Allen said that the circular sent by the general secretary and treasurer of the order was the first move toward a grand co-operation by all of the labor leaders throughout the country for strong and full effort for an advance of industrial reform. He has great faith in the efficacy of the move, and in its organization. He says the time is not far distant when the people's interests will triumph. Evidently the coming presidential election will find them but just getting into shape, as he does not hope to place the industrial movement presidential candidate in the white house until 1896.

NEWS FROM NORWALK.

Huron county farmers are evidently holding back their wheat for better prices, only about 7,000 bushels of new wheat have yet been marketed in this city, whereas last year at this time over 30,000 bushels were sold to Norwalk buyers.

Mrs. Mattie Peak and daughter, accompanied by Mrs. Peak's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Kinney, leave Norwalk to-morrow for San Diego, Cal., where they will be absent for a year, or more.

How Edinboro Town Impresses the American Traveler.

The Monument to the Wizard of the North.

The Clarendon and Princes Street View — The Castle and Mary Stuart—Old Holyrood—John Knox' Home—Firth of Forth Bridge.

Staff Correspondence Toledo Bee.

Edinburg, July 15.—Only forty-five miles from Glasgow to Edinboro' through the prettiest pastoral part of Scotland. How ponderous the great engines look hooded and blanketed with painted sheet steel. The headlight (if there is any) is closed over in day light and there are no cow-catchers; no need of any, they don't catch their cows that way in this country. There are no unhedged fields and woods where sheep and cattle may go astray. The tenant farmer, his boys and shepherd dogs know where their droves and flocks are. I haven't seen a pig or heard one squeal in all Scotland.

The big car wheels lift the cars so high you can step from the platform into them without descent.

On the express trains of the British & North Western, and the Caledonian, Pullman sleepers have been introduced and are considered a great luxury. Night travel is light. The largest stretch that tourists take is from Edinburgh to London which can be compassed from ten in the morning to eight in the evening.

Edinboro impresses the stranger at first sight. Princes street where all the fine hotels are located is magnificent and never fails to bring exclamations of delight from the stranger as he climbs the stairs from the railway station and all its beauty and brightness bursts upon him at once. It is on the terraces of lofty Highlands, is built upon one side only, and the other side of its broad, clean asphalt pave and side-walks are Princes street gardens, once a wild ravine, now a vista of beauty with its winding paths, flowers and shrubs. On the brow of this declivity the monument to Walter Scott is placed, said to be the finest specimen of gothic architecture in the world. It was erected in 1844 at an expense of £15,650. It is built of Scotch granite and marble and its final spires rise 190 feet above the Mound on which the pedestal rests. Two hundred and eighty-seven steps lead to the top, through thirteen galleries, from each of which may be had varied and extended views of the city. Under the first canopy, in pure white marble, is a figure of Scott, sitting, with his favorite hound, Maida crouching at his feet. In the niches from base to crowning turret are statues of the characters in his novels and poems.

Whoever tells you about the monument will tell you also of its designer, an untrained and ambitious young architect who was possessed of a wonderful gift. He thought and wrought night and day and died from the strain of excitement and overwork before the monument was completed. His name was George M. Kemp and his memory is kept green along with that of him in whose honor the tribute fashioned by his hand was upraised.

There are monuments to Allan Ramsey, the poet, Christopher North, David Livingstone and other great men of the nation, along the brow of the "Mound." The massive buildings of the "Royal Institution," surmounted by a colossal statue of the Queen, and the National Gallery are also built upon the garden side of the street.

Across these ravine gardens, in the shade of great beech and yew trees up a long winding avenue, is Castle rock, three hundred feet above the sea level, and from which looms up the celebrated pile of battlement and tower, which all the centuries from the eleventh to the present one have builded. And this is the picture to be seen from the windows of the handsome shops, hotels and public buildings which make Princes street famous—a picture found no where else in the heart of a modern city. The business blocks are chiefly of a light-colored sandstone columned and strengthened by polished granite and marbles.

At the foot of Princes street is Calton Hill which bears aloft an elaborate monument to Nelson, overlooking a goodly portion of the town on one side and salt water on the other. Here is also a monument to Burns. Robbie Burns, Sir Walter Scott and Mary Queen of Scots divide the reverence and homage of travelers in Scotland. Britain loves to honor her great men and memorial stones in varying degrees of artistic form look down upon you from almost any hill or part the foliage of groves in the historic, busy city or the quiet nestling village.

Edinboro is built upon alternate hights and hollows; the hills are crowned with castle-like buildings, universities and cathedrals and the ravines are terraced gardens. (We inquired of a guard, "what castle is that?" and were informed "it is the city prison.")

I went to the first hotel on "Gage's" list, the "Clarendon," opposite Castle rock and did not find my Toledoans registered there as I had anticipated. But the exhilarating highland sea air, and the beauty of the scene, different from anything my eyes had ever beheld, forbade loneliness or depression. Then I was given the most cordial and home-like greeting by the host of the house, who is an English gentleman of the best type. Ah, how a little leaven of courtesy and kindly interest lightens the stranger's burden of travel when he is thousands of miles from the place where every one gives the welcoming hand.

Genial Mr. Ellis will never know just how comforting his pleasant words were to me. Upon inquiry if I was traveling alone, an unusual thing for women to do in this country, I explained to him about the home folk somewhere ahead of me, and the party of boat-friends at another hotel, showed him my Bee credentials, and the best of everything in the elegant hotel was mine. Out of courtesy to American guests, the stars and stripes floated from the flag-staff above the building, which was another comfort. Not only because of these gentle courtesies, but, because the "Clarendon" is the best hotel I have found since I left New York and with prices most reasonable, do I recommend it to Americans.

To change from busy, commercial Glasgow, with its ship-building, its manufactories of cotton, paper, chemicals and beer, with its tallest factory chimney in the world (over 450 feet), and its largest drug and chemical establishment employs more than a thousand men), with its 700,000 population, to bright, pleasure-loving, classic, historic, scholarly Edinburgh, is to experience a complete change of atmosphere, literally and metaphorically.

Glasgow is distinctively Scotch; Edinburgh, not half so large, is ten times as cosmopolitan. It is a summer resort city, as well as a residence resort for persons of means and those who wish to avail themselves of the advantages of its schools, air, scenery and society.

To "write up" Edinburgh would be to involve the whole history of Scotland. It is Sir Walter Scott's "own romantic town," and the scene of the most interesting and pathetic memories of lovely and unfortunate Mary Stuart. Old town and new town meet and join hands, and admiration of the beauty of the one blends with thoughtful meditation over the sorrowful and departed greatness of the other.

The old castle lifts its frowning front as if in defiance of the new, which has laid hands upon and restored some of its crumbling corners, built approaches across the ravine, the "fosse," as ancient historians term it, which helped to make the rock with its fortifications nearly impregnable.

To this spot was made our first visit. In company with friends of the "State of Nevada" we climbed the winding way under the shade of the beeches, passed the ponderous portcullis, the several ancient gates and entered the court where sentinels stand at every turn.

This mountain of greenstone rock, as green and gray with lichen as it is moss-covered with history and mystery, bore fortifications before the Christian era, but with a single exception no portion of the present edifice dates farther back than the 15th century.

Crossing the fine esplanade within the military outworks, where Lord John Forbes, Lady Glammis, several early reformers and persons accused of witchcraft were executed and where to-day Her Majesty's soldiers drill daily, we come upon a Boston gentleman, studying his guide book, Dr. Moulton by name. In chance conversation, such as Americans abroad are apt to indulge in, he asks about his friend, Dr. Tobey, of Toledo, and joins us in the breezy promenade about the ramparts to look at the historic guns and get the splendid view of the city below. There are the barred windows from which captive lords and ladies looked forth. The kings and queens of Scotland trod these same old stones centuries agone.

The old parliament hall where they held their great banquets was 80 feet long, 35 feet wide and 27 feet high. It is now the garrison hospital. We pass into Queen Mary's private bed chamber where she gave birth to James VI. in 1566, in whom were united the crowns of Scotland and England. An oblong, narrow little room that wouldn't give place to a modern bed and table without crowding. The carved ceiling is untouched except by the finger of time. I think the walls have been swept once or twice. It is an ugly dungeon-like place and we buy photographs of lovely pair Marie "from the original after" somebody, also an "album" and hasten down the stone stairs. The crown room contains in a large glass case the ancient crown, scepter, sword of state and royal jewels of Scotland, wonderful in their beauty and richness.

The Half-Moon battery contains an electrical apparatus connected with the tower on top of Nelson's monument on Calton Hill by wires so far above the city you cannot see them from the streets, by which a 1 o'clock time gun is discharged daily. The morning salute is fired from a historic old gun. We went into a dark stony gloomy little chapel which smells like a tomb, the private chapel of St. Margaret, dating back into the eleventh century or earlier and left in its primitive condition, the oldest building in all old Edinburg.

Our guide gets nervous because we meditate, while another party is waiting at the gate and we pass out and descend the rock with the histories of Scottish monarchs in intricate confusion in our minds.

But more interesting even than the castle with its romantic stories and legends is old Holyrood, abbey and palace to which we next turn our steps and mind. The abbey which is now a roofless ruin was founded in 1128 by James IV. and was once a magnificent edifice, and the richest establishment in all Scotland. It has felt all the vicissitudes of barbarous warfare; the tombs of its monarchs were desecrated in the revolution, it was fired by the English, sacked, pillaged and its last restoration, or rather preservation of what remained, was in 1816. One wall built soon after the Reformation with its heavy masonry and beautiful carving remains quite perfect. Out of the eventful centuries the ruin looks in present daylight a most pathetic monument of man's ambitions and passions, his cruelty in the name of religion and his blood-thirst misnamed patriotism.

Under inscribed slabs lie the dust of Scottish kings and queens. Here queen Mary and Lord Darnley were married and in a gloomy cavern at the side Lord Darnley is buried. With the abbey was once connected a suite of royal apartments which historians describe as furnished in great splendor. Holrood palace, on ground adjoining, was founded in 1501, and underwent various changes and improvements during the centuries following. We pass into the fine room called the Picture Gallery. It is 150 feet long and proportioned in height and width. The walls are lined with reputed paintings of rulers and celebrities of Scotland from the misty centuries to days of historic dates. Very few of them are accredited works of art.

The room has been restored to habitable condition and is now used for the election of Scottish representative peers, and for the levees of the lord high commissioners to the general assembly of the church of Scotland. (Solemn place for a levee one would say.)

With awed breath we enter the apartments of Queen Mary and her attendants. Here she robed her lovely form for the banquet or state audience chamber, here she stood in her beautiful bridal robes, while the Earl of Bothwell awaited her coming. Here is her bed chamber with its canopied bed and oaken furniture, the walls hung with the faded and moth-eaten tapestry she brought with her from France, the bed spread with the age-worn silk quilt with its once crimson and gold fringe. These are preserved in nearly the same condition as when the unhappy queen looked upon them for the last time.

Just before the door of Mary's private supper room, attention is called to dark stains in the stone, which we are solemnly told is the blood of "the faithful Rizzio," who you remember, was dragged through her chamber by Lord Darnley and his conspirators and stabbed to death in her presence.

Hanging near her bed is a handsome life-size picture of the queen, painted during a brief interval of handsomeness in her stormy life. It is even old, but looking at it one understands how friend and foe owned the charm of her grace and beauty.

In Lord Darnley's room is the most elaborate tapistry and the best preserved of any in the palace. It represents forests and hunting scenes and is rich in green and gray color even now, though the canvas and needle stitches are frayed and broken. Think of the patient fingers that wrought, hundreds of years ago, these graceful patterns with the needle, sufficient to cover the walls of rooms in so many palaces.

We passed up and down the grand staircases, and the narrow winding ones, saw relics of the old days in many of the rooms, and somewhat oppressed with the gloomy grandeur and the thought of the tragedies, the heartaches and woes of all of which the silent and gray old walls give no sign by their scars, were glad to get out into the sunny courtyard and hear about Mary's garden, the one-time extent of the grounds into what is now a portion of the city and many other out-door notes of interest.

Returning we entered the house of John Knox, well preserved, but with its distinctive character unimpaired. It stands on a corner of High street and in its day was a house of some pretentions. Above the first tier of windows is inscribed, "Gray God abuy al others and yure neighbor as yureself"—J. McGregor, manufacturer of snuff," the latter in newer letters and orthography. We were shown through the rooms open to visitors, and found many things of interest. We came across a Yankee who had his pocketbook in his hand and wanting to know how cheap "that picture" could be bought. It was a historic print of the old house in its best days, and the only one in existence exactly of its kind. The woman simply smiled and said it was not for sale.

The study of the great Reformer and his old oaken chair have the appearance of being just what the woman with the pleasant voice assures us they are. The pictures and inscriptions are curious. We looked from the window where he stood and hurled his defiant eloquence to the crowds below. Knox lived in this house from 1560 to 1572 and died here in the 67th year of his age. Over his body Regent Morton pronounced the eulogium, "Here lies he who never feared the face of man."

Through old Canongate, once a royal road, now the quarters of the poorest poor, in the Heart of Mid-Lothian, in fact, at every turn in old Edinburgh, the characters and descriptions in Walter Scott's novels come to mind. His genius pervades it all. The "Waverly" is everywhere in city and country nomenclature. We passed his house on Castle street, the leaving of which caused him so much sorrow.

SKIN DARK AS COAL

Eczema Afflicts a Well-Known Gentleman. Pitiable Subject to Look Upon. Suffered Terribly. Whole Body Covered.

Given Up by San Francisco Doctors. Might Have Saved $600, as He Was Cured for $6 by Cuticura Remedies.

I have many times studied over what CUTICURA has done for me; it has restored me to good health and happiness, for before I tried CUTICURA REMEDIES I was given up by all the doctors in San Francisco; but if I had only taken a certain gentleman's advice and tried CUTICURA REMEDIES sooner, I should certainly have saved from $500 to $600. I was a most pitiable subject to look upon with eczema and suffered terribly. I was almost as dark as coal from my insteep up to my knees on both legs, and after that it broke out all over my body; but after using half a dozen sets of CUTICURA REMEDIES I was perfectly restored to good health, and have enjoyed the same ever since (which is for over two years). A great number of people visit my establishment, and I have told hundreds of people what CUTICURA has done for me, but have thought that I ought to write and let you know, so that you can refer any one in this county to me. AT THE BEND OF THE ROAD.

At the bend of the road you waved your hand,
A token and sign of a last adieu,
And the twilight fell on a lonely land,
And over my soul a sorrow new;
And you turned into the world from me
Who watched you with eyes whose hot tears flowed,
The cruel world which I could not see
That just begins at the bend of the road.

And a trouble dropped on a silent land
With the darkness unstayed by a moon or a star,
For my hope and my love, and the light, hand to hand,
Followed you into the future afar,
Followed you fain as the heart that sent
The heart that lingered beneath its load
As into the great, wide world you went,
The world that begins at the bend of the road.

To-night at the bend of the road I stand,
And a year has flown and many a day,
And the twilight falls on a lonely land,
For my love and the light and my hope delay;
I hear the far sound of forgetful strife,
And a fear forlorn doth my soul forebode,
What must thou done with my love, my life,
O world that begins at the bend of the road.

A new method of boiling eggs, without either fire or hot water, has been invented by a Frenchman. "In a little iron vessel of some kind," reads the recipe, "put your egg or eggs with a small piece of quicklime. By means of a stout string lower this into the bottom of a pit. Two minutes later pull it up and you will discover your eggs to be cooked to a turn."

One of the earliest and most annoying of insects is that midnight marauder, the bedbug. An English naturalist has discovered proofs that this domestic pest was quite common in the armies of the world at least 120 years before the Christian era and that he was ever a sea rover, as the fleets of that day had their timbers stocked with this breed of nocturnal prowlers.

The most unhappy period of marriage, according to French divorce statistics, is for the period extending from the fifth to the tenth year. After that the figures drop rapidly. Only 28 per cent. of the couples seek divorce between their tenth and twentieth years of unions. Only one pair in 100 seeks to cut the knot after the period of over thirty and under forty years.

As was to be expected, the Edison lamp decision is stimulating work on forms that will not infringe. Among other current rumors, it is stated from the west that a new lamp will shortly be placed on the market which will not infringe on any of the incandescent lamp patents in force. Silver dimes are turned out now at the rate of 100,000 a day. No less than $3,176,476 in silver dimes have been struck off in the past three years. A new kind of stamps will soon be introduced in the postal telegraph service of Russia with a view to securing the inviolability of the privacy of letters. The new stamp is printed on very thin paper, and cannot be used a sain if it is once put upon a letter. When used wet and taken off the envelope it leaves an indelible impression upon the spot where it was attached, so that if a new stamp is put upon the same spot the impression of the first stamp can be seen through it.

The Spanish and Portuguese governments have notified the Russian government that at the expiration of the present term they will discontinue their commercial treaties with Russia. The Spanish treaty expires June 30 and the Portuguese on February 9, 1892. At about the same time the commercial treaties between Russia and the other governments of western Europe will expire. The ministry of finance is at work planning new treaties with a view of guarding the interest of the Russian trade in Europe.

A letter received in St. Paul from the Menage exploring expedition records the discovery of a new race of people in the Philippine islands. "It had been decided to make the ascent of the highest mountain in the Philippines, and it was when a hight of 1,200 feet had been reached that it was first discovered that the mountains were inhabited, and by an entirely different people than had ever been seen in the low lands. After several attempts to photograph a group the feat was accomplished. It took a great deal of maneuvering, as the natives were not up with the kodak craze, and imagined that the camera was on the scalp hunt."

The French peasant is said to be changing for the worse. He is losing both his thrift and sobriety. He has taken to drink like the inhabitants of the city slums, and his thirst is for brandy. In the villages the women are pictured as obliged—like the wives of the workmen in the cities—to hang about the public houses on paydays and fight for money to buy bread. Instead of putting his sous and silver in a long stocking the countryman spends them in the tavern. Formerly he drank only on holidays; now he treats himself and his friends every day in the week. The wives of married peasants soon follow their husbands in vice. Strong liquors are cheap; there is no Sunday, or even early closing, and no blue ribbon army in the country.

Word comes from Vienna, says the Electrical Engineer, that a Capt. Walter has discovered a method of amalgamating glass with other metals beside platinum, enabling manufacturers of electric lamps to make them at a cost much less than at present. The platinum wire used in the construction of the bulb is expensive, but it has nearly the same rate of expansion as glass. Changes of temperature cause both to change bulk at nearly the same rate, so that it the platinum wire once fits the holes through the glass it always does so, and thus prevents the inrush of air, which would be fatal to the life of the carbon filament. Reports have been current of similar advances here, notably by an inventor at Louisville, Ky.

An interesting fact was brought out at the historical exhibition in Paris, where specimens of gloves were seen dating back to those of the Grecian empire. "The sizes of those gloves were proof indisputable that among the belles of ancient days, and even those of the middle ages, the tiny hands so common among the women of to-day were entirely unknown. A visit to the Hohenzollern museum will convince any one that the usual foot was equally rare in earlier times, and that, judging from their slippers, the feet of the famous Russian queens and princesses would do credit to a dandy in the Grenadier guards. Only the beautiful Queen Louise possessed delicate and pretty feet, the satin shoe belonging to her lamented and revered majesty seeming like those of a child beside the square-toed No. 6 slippers of the Empress Augusta and the No. 5 wedding slippers belonging to the ex-Empress Frederick."

IN A NEST OF REPTILES.

Snakes Wreck a Jersey Farmer's Home.

For Months They Lived High From His Larder.

Undermining His Kitchen, the Floor Gave Way and Revealed a Most Sickening Sight.

Philadelphia, Aug. 4.—Lambertville, New Jersey, and its environs swarm with snakes. Off to the east of the town, where the country grows wild and rocky, there are dark holes at every turn that seem a likely habitat for the crawling things, and make one shudder.

But the uncanny experience of Farmer Joseph Githens, who lives about a mile and a half from the postoffice, gave a rude shock to the townsmen last week, accustomed though they are to the "pesky varmints," and women and children start nervously to-day at the very mention of the "beasts." The word sets their flesh crawling.

Githens stopped at the old Lambertville hotel last Saturday to water his horses, and as he told his story the listeners eyed him mouth agape.

The house he calls his home is a rude log affair, with two rooms on the ground floor and a garret. It stands back from the country road in a rocky field. It is a rough shanty, full of cracks and crevices; rank grass flourishes under the stone steps in front and reaches up toward the dilapidated window sills. There is a seedy looking acre of land about the hut that bears no sign of cultivation now or at any time.

The farmer and his wife have seen snakes in plenty here and there in the neighborhood, but so have all the country folk for miles around, and thought nothing of it. It is a land of reptiles, and little toddling boys and girls learn to tramp on and kill garters and slim black snakes as they would toads. There is no dread of them.

It was about two months ago that Mrs. Githens began to tell her husband of various articles being stolen from their open larder in the back yard. Milk would be dipped out of the pans, eggs and butter taken bodily away; many chickens disappeared, and almost every conceivable kind of victuals took its departure in a strange way.

The things were generally missed in the morning, but not always. Thieves were suspected. Tramps are continually moving back and forth through the country, and Mr. Githens laid the sundry robberies at their door. He kept his old rusty gun in a handy place, and gave his wife a lesson or two in handling it. He laid in wait nights when he could.

He finally got a small black-and-tan dog to keep watch, but this animal disappeared and the farmer gave it up as a bad job. The things that disappeared were not valuable enough to give the couple much worry, but the thieving went on as the weeks passed.

The crisis came on Friday last. As Mr. and Mrs. Githens moved around to get their breakfast that morning, they noticed the earthern floor about the big stove in the kitchen somewhat cracked. But they gave it little attention, and went on with their meal. Soon after 7 o'clock the farmer left the house and walked 100 yards off to the barn, where he was getting in some hay.

His attention was called from the job not long afterward by a wild shriek from his wife, who rushed out of the rear door of the hut and beckoned excitedly for her spouse. He hurried toward her.

While Mrs. Githens was upstairs in the garret she had heard a jumbling sound below, and looking down the rickety stairway to the kitchen saw a strange sight. The stove was gone, and in its place was a gaping hole three or four feet across. Without waiting to investigate she summoned her husband.

Amazed at the collapse of his kitchen floor Githens got a lima bean pole from the yard, seven or eight feet long, and shoved it down into the gaping chasm to test its depth. Standing back from the edge lest the earth should further crumble he reached the rod down six feet, when it seemed suddenly to be gripped by a muscular hand down below, moved and twisted about, and was finally wrenched from his grasp.

Involuntarily he started back, and his wife screamed. Things were serious enough to make a call upon the neighbors desirable. A number of Githens' friends were told of the crisis and hurried with him back to the kitchen.

The hole meanwhile had become bigger. A piece of newspaper was touched with a match and tossed into the aperture. As it blazed up in its descent it revealed some sort of life in the big cavern. A lantern was finally gotten and its rays thrown down the black hole.

And then the three men saw a sight that made them sick with fright. The whole bottom of the chasm was one bristling bed of snakes—smooth, shining black snakes. The reptiles were of every size.

A big head with open jaws and darting forked tongue, was raised up above the squirming heap that must have belonged to a huge 12-foot crawler. Wound in and out through his folds were scores of baby snakes from six inches to three feet long.

The whole earth seemed to be wriggling, and at the disgusting sight the party threw themselves backward from the loathsome place. They took but one look more, and that was enough. The whole house it was evident would soon be overrun with the creeping horde, and Farmer Githens and his wife moved away to a neighbor's.

Since Friday noon they have not set foot near the worse than haunted spot. No one will approach the place. Even the men folk are afraid.

But Mr. Githens now knows that the den of slimy snakes is the den of thieves for which he watched for many weeks. The reptiles had cleaned out the big hole under the house, made a nest of it, and then preyed for food on the Githens provender.

It was these stealthy robbers that made off with the butter and eggs, the chickens and bread, and that had lapped the fresh milk from Mrs. Githens' pans. It was probably the snakes, too, that seized and carried off the dog set to watch for robbers, and dragged him down into the crawling hole beneath the stove.

And now the neighborhood does not talk lightly of its snake population, and the "varmin" and their nests are given a wide berth by every farmer and housewife. Mr. Githens swears he will never return to his rickety house even should it be purged of the teeming snake life down below.

OHIO AT DETROIT.

Complimentary Allusions to Toledo G. A. R. Posts.

How Ex-President Hayes Marched in the Ranks With the Veterans—Splendid Appearance of Toledo Post.

Concerning the impression Ohio made at Detroit, and especially Toledo, the following is taken from Detroit papers:

The department of Ohio was led by the Juvenile Drum corps from Hamilton, O., while Department-Commander Warner's horse wore a double string of large buckeyes suspended around its neck. And oh! what an army of veterans Ohio alone had in line. One hour and twenty minutes it took the Buckeye boys to pass a given point, and it really seemed as if the suspicion that men enough to run the state had not been left at home was justified.

The Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dayton, Columbus and Toledo posts all made a splendid showing and were justly commented upon as being among the very finest organizations in line, while the ladies of Columbus, who appeared in uniforms of blue dresses with brass buttons and red caps, were greeted with shouts of approval just as soon as they were descried.

Forsyth Post, of Toledo, carried the large copper canteen that was presented to them by Fairbanks Post, of this city, two years ago, much to the delight of the latter, who cheered repeatedly as the canteen was carried down Washington avenue past them.

Toledo post, No. 107, was another of the finest appearing bodies in the great parade, the members all wearing a very becoming and dressy costume consisting of black Prince Albert coats, dark trousers and white straw hats with black bands.

When Dawson post, No. 2, of Fremont, O., a rather small organization, passed along, there were very few people comparatively, who recognized in one of its members, a pleasant looking, gray bearded man, an ex-president of the United States, and yet it was, and Comrade Rutherford B. Hayes appeared just as contented as he did in the days when he was drawn about in open barouches, the gazed upon of all gazers.

This one little incident contains a whole commentary on the democracy of our institutions, and the fact that a man who has been chief magistrate of this nation of nations can return to the station whence he came, and trudge along in a big parade, touching elbows with men who never thought of being else than commoners, with them demonstrates that this country is bigger than any man, no matter what his proportions may be.

Forsyth post was the first of Toledo's posts and in the ranks four men carried the big copper canteen presented to the post by the Fairbanks post, of this city, on the occasion of a visit to Toledo about five years ago.

Toledo had 600 men in line and the Toledo post, headed by the Toledo fife and drum corps, marched nicely. The boys' drum corps headed Ford post, of East Toledo, and the new Volunteer post, of Toledo, 170 strong, appeared well in white helmets.—Free Press.

Toledo Straw Hat Brigade.

The straw hat brigade of Toledo looked like Detroit post in their elegant outfit. Ohio's quiet line seemed to be going on forever with an almost continual crash of drums, cymbals and the piercing whistle of fifes. Thomas Neal post stepped to the music of "Sherman's March to the Sea," the first band playing that splendid tune. "When is Ohio going to get by?" was an inquiry frequently put.—Evening News.

In the National Cemetery at Pittsburg Landing there are 3,500 union soldiers and four women buried in the cemetery. The latter were nurses in the army, who contracted diseases while at work in the hospitals, died and were buried in the cemetery. Every other grave is marked with a headstone, but the graves of the women were entirely ignored. Some one had planted an evergreen or so over their graves, but otherwise they are unmarked. No one seems to know why the graves had been neglected, save that the War Department directed that no tombstones should be erected. There must be an interesting bit of history connected with the matter, if one had time and opportunity to look it up, and some women's society might start an investigation.

EDMUNDS AT HOME.

How the Retired Senator Passes These Days.

He Flies the Rod and Gun and Jogs About Behind a Slow Horse Not in Full Dress.

Lillian Wright, in a letter from Burlington, Vt., to the Boston Transcript says: The newspaper-reading world is familiar with the public life of Hon. George F. Edmunds, United States senator from Vermont, who sent in his resignation 25 years to a day from the time of his appointment. But not even the senator's books, which inspired the famous Ashville interview, have revealed much of his home life, for the senator is even more reticent in regard to his delightful home and family than his public acts, and both Mrs. Edmunds and daughter feel they have a right to the privacy of their own lives and pursuits, and resolutely and effectually avoid and suppress personal mention in print; consequently few outside the immediate personal family friends know really anything of Mr. Edmunds' truest and happiest life.

Fifty-five Years in One House.

The long summers are spent in their Burlington home—a large old brick house two and three stories high, situated at the corner of Main and South Union streets, that has been Mrs. Edmunds' home for fifty-five years. Upon their marriage in 1859 Senator Edmunds came into the home of his father-in-law, Hon. Wyllis Lyman. Additions and changes have been made from time to time as family convenience demanded. This year it was the senators' library that was greatly enlarged. An air of quiet elegance pervades the house, evincing the good taste of its occupants. In the lofty hall one's eye is immediately attracted to an Indian war bonnet—the horns and hair from a buffalo's head ornamented with eagle's feathers.

A portion of the fresco from the capital hangs opposite the doorway, and a brass Italian lamp with pendant snuffers, pinchers and extinguishers are among the hall furnishings. Near the entrance to the drawing-room is a unique card receiver—an enormous stone Indian mortar and pestle—found and presented to Mrs. Edmunds while at Dalle, on the Columbian River. Many articles of vertu have been collected on their foreign tour, and, as souvenirs of pleasantest foreign days and months, are worth much more than their intrinsic value.

The position of honor, at the west end of the drawing room, which extends the whole north end of the house, is given a copy of the famous Rembrandt Peele painting of George Washington at Washington, the life-size face looking out from stonework background. On either side are Healey photographs of Daniel Webster and Lord Ashburton, of Ashburton treaty fame. A pair of ugly pistols used by Turkish Janisaries hang near an antique little Italian lamp from the Adriatic. A Hiram Powers' copy of Dante's death mask hangs in immediate proximity to dainty water-color landscapes. Paintings by Guido and modern artists, portraits and photographs of past and present personages and scenes adorn the walls and mantels.

From the west windows, especially the upper ones, and the western piazza fine views of lake Champlain and the Adirondacks are obtained. Whiteface, as usual, the most prominent peak. The house is so high it quite overlooks the lower part of the town, and the views of the broad lake, dotted with islands and all varieties of water craft, is charming. The grounds are extensive and covered with trees. A high, close fence completely shuts out curious and prying eyes from the street.

An Orchardist by Proxy.

The senator's apple trees are too well known to receive further mention, though, as a matter of fact, most of the arduous labor of grafting trees and gathering fruit, which he is represented as performing with streaming brow, bared head and hands, sans coat and waistcoat, is really done by the old gardener and his young assistants, the senator being to give orders as to what, not how. Occasionally, however, he is an interested spectator. The shade trees are nearly all American varieties. A member of the family said, with few exceptions they had been set out since Hon. Mr. Edmunds' marriage, and were gotten, one at a time, on their little outings and family drives, usually brought home under the carriage-seat, but sometimes tiny ones were dug up and carried with their hands.

Rides and Drives:

Senator Edmunds is very domestic in his habits and tastes, and his greatest happiness is found in the companionship of his wife and daughter. When the latter he takes long horseback rides, and they are a familiar sight on both Washington and Burlington roads. Both exhibit superior horsemanship. Senator Edmunds possesses valuable horses and fine equipages, but in his ordinary drives goes frequently in a most democratic manner, jogging along behind a middle-aged gray horse, sitting about half-way on the narrow seat of a more than middle-aged express wagon, in a costume that is not exactly full dress, with a cheery word and nod for each acquaintance he chances to meet.

He is a regular old-fashioned early riser while in Burlington, holding many jolly conversations over the hedges, and even across the street with those of his neighbors who are up and out betimes. His old friends find him the same frank, companionable friend of earlier days, unchanged by the many and world-wide honors thrust upon him—taking a keen delight in reading "my obituaries," as he humorously styles the many fake interviews. Reading the papers in his own pleasant breakfast room to "find out in how many different places I am spending my vacation to-day." If press reports were only true, Senator Edmunds would have triumphed over matter in his ability to be in from three to five places at the same time.

He Catches Some Fish

As a matter of fact nearly all summer has been spent in Burlington and vicinity, with the exception of three or four days trout fishing in Lowell, Vt., and occasional outings near home. He is a most enthusiastic sportsman with rod or gun, but he is a specially successful angler. A member of a fishing quarternion of Senator Edmund's selection speaks in highest terms of him as a sportsman and companion in their annual Adirondack outings, saying he is the life of the party. His unruffled good humor, ready wit and apt repartee, and an inexhaustable fund of anecdotes, grave and gay, make him the most companionable of men under broiling sun or lowering skies, by the fitful light of camp-fire or on the long miles of a fruitless tramp.

Still a Heavy Mail.

Vacation is not all fishing excursions by any means. His daily private and official correspondence is sufficiently bulky to overwhelm an ordinary man. Besides his regular congressional duties, he is retained on many important cases, and is besieged by pension claimants, always doing whatever is in his power to assist, not as Senator Edmunds, but Mr. Edmunds, merely a citizen of the United States.

He has always been very careful not to misuse his Senatorial power—in fact, was remarkably conscientious about it. His resignation from the Senate after a quarter of a century of distinguished service was simply and solely on account of the ill effect of the Washington climate upon the health of himself and his invalid daughter. While his is a place it would be almost impossible to fill, the country cannot refuse him a well-earned vacation after twenty-five of the best years of his life have been given to distinguished service to these United States of America.

HOW TO KEEP FROM DROWNING.

A Few Practical Hints—How to Walk or Float in Water.

To keep from drowning it is not necessary to know how to swim. This may seem at first a rather strong assertion, but much depends on the meaning that is attached to the word "swim." A man may be able to "tread water," yet he may not know how to swim. When a man swims it means another and somewhat different thing. In the main the difference is one of position—of standing upright or of sprawling in the water. Of course, the dog cannot swim as the man can and does, but a man may swim on first trial as a dog swims, if he will only do as the dog does.

TREADING WATER.

In what follows the object is to show how drowning may, under ordinary circumstances, be prevented even in the case of persons wholly ignorant of what is called the art of swimming.

In the first place, it is perfectly natural for every human being to float. With the lungs inflated and the body below the water, one cannot possibly sink. There is no easier method of keeping afloat than by treading water. The operation is just like running up stairs, and about as difficult. It is perfectly natural for animals to "swim." Throw a dog into the water, and at once he begins to walk the same as when out of the water. Why should a man, woman or child do different under like circumstances? Clearly there is no good reason why any human being who cannot swim should make a few helpless struggles, raise an outcry, throw up the hands, and sing out of sight.

The trouble is that nine persons out of ten lose their presence of mind when for the first time in water beyond their depth. If, instead of struggling, people would do more thinking, fewer would be drowned. Oddly enough, people have to be told to do just what the animal does instinctively in the water. The dog, the horse, the deer and even the cat tread or walk the water at first attempt. Man's ignorance of so simple a thing as treading water is a little remarkable. It is nonsense to say that animals have any advantage in the water over men. On the contrary, man has the further advantage of paddle-formed hands and of being able to rest himself when tired by floating, a thing which the animals never do. The man who cannot swim must follow the example of the animal, and should go on all fours. He must strike alternately with hand and foot, exactly as the dog does—one, two; one, two.

All human beings can walk in the water without any preliminary practice, if they will simply keep cool headed. The cut shows how it is done. In order, then, to keep from drowning it is necessary only to tread or walk the water.

The most simple way to preserve life out of your depth is to float, which consists simply in lying flat on your back. This is easily accomplished by keeping the lungs inflated, the head thrown well back, the limbs extended but flexible, the arms placed close to the ears, with the hands over the head. The majority of people prefer to float on the back rather than to stand upright. Yet any man, woman or child who can walk on dry land can also walk in the water with safety.

HOW TO FLOAT.

The above figure shows the correct position for floating on the back.

It is surprising how long animals and human beings are capable of sustaining themselves in water. In one well authenticated instance a dog swam ashore with a letter in his mouth at the Cape of Good Hope, while the crew of the ship to which the dog belonged all perished. The sailors need not have been lost had they treaded water as the dog did. Although unable to rest by the way animals swim immense distances. Last year a dog was washed overboard during a gale off Cape Hatteras, and yet made his way safely to shore. Only a week or two ago some cattle were swept from a vessel during a storm off the Maine coast, and more than half of them were saved.

If you cannot swim and should fall overboard don't scream, but try to "climb upstairs" with hands and feet.—New York Advertiser.

A BOY REVOLUTIONARY HERO.

He Led Ethan Allen and His Gallant Men to a British Stronghold.

Of the boy heroes of the revolution the first and almost forgotten one was Nathan Beman. In the spring of 1775 he lived with his father, a farmer, near the village of Shoreham, which was opposite Fort Ticonderoga. Farmer Beman was an American devoted to the cause. Being of a roving disposition and fond of play Nathan had often crossed the lake and formed the acquaintance of the boys whose fathers composed the garrison. The little fellows had fine times under the walls of the fort, and every now and then Nathan went inside and saw how things were moving along there. In the month of May Ethan Allen at the head of the famous Green Mountain boys, came up through the forests to surprise and capture, if possible, the fort and its garrison. The expedition, with which Benedict Arnold was connected, was composed of three divisions, one of which was to capture some boats at Skenesborough and send them down the lake to Allen and his men, who were to get them at Shoreham. But when the renowned Green Mountain leader reached the latter village, in the night time, not a single boat awaited him. This was a bitter disappointment, for Allen had but 83 men with him, and his position was one of great hazard. It looked like madness to assail with his small force an armed place like Ticonderoga, yet it was still more dangerous to remain idle.

"We can't wait for the boats, my boys!" exclaimed the intrepid Allen. "We must assault the fortress."

In looking for a guide the Vermonter found Farmer Beman, who as soon as he understood what was wanted, said:

"Why not take my boy. Nathan knows all about the fort. He's been all over it, and knows the location of every rat hole inside and out."

The suggestion delighted Allen, and little Nathan was called and questioned.

"I'll go, sir!" he said at once. "I know the way to Delaplace's quarters, too, if you should want to find him."

Delaplace was the commandant and, of course, the very person whom Allen wanted. The little party crossed the lake in such boats as they had at hand. The oars were dipped silently in the starlit water, and no one spoke above a whisper. Morning was near at hand, and so much precious time had been lost that every moment had to be put to use. When the patriots reached the opposite shore the commander turned to Nathan Beman, and, laying his hand upon his shoulder, said quickly:

"We're ready now. Show us the way to the sally port."

Guided by the farmer's son, the mountaineers moved toward the fort, and, coming suddenly upon a sentry, heard the snapping of his fusee lock and saw him run through a covered way within the walls.

"Quick!" cried the boy looking up at Allen, and the soldiers sprang after the guard and made their way to the parade ground unopposed. The enthusiasm of the patriots now broke forth into shouts of victory which, reaching the ears of the British soldiers, caused them to spring from their pallets and rush from their barracks, only to be made prisoners as they appeared. Never was surprise more complete thanks to Nathan Beman. When Allen had secured most of the garrison he asked the boy to show the way to the commander's room, and the two were soon running up the steps leading to it.

Bang! bang! went Allen's sword against the colonel's door, and the British officer hurried out of bed to answer the demand. It happened that Allen and Delaplace were old acquaintances, and the reader can imagine the latter's astonishment when he saw who was hammering at the door. Of course there was was nothing for him to do but to surrender. The spoils that fell into the hands of the victors amply repaid them for all the dangers they had faced, and the fort remained in the hands of the Americans for many months later, when it was abandoned and dismantled by Gen. St. Clair. Amid the general rejoicings that followed this exploit the part played by Nathan Beman was not forgotten. His name was on many tongues and his services were embalmed in the poetry of the day. Without him Allen's heroic expedition would in all probability have resulted in failure.

Nathan grew to manhood and ended his days in peace in the year 1856, dying then in Franklin county, New York, at the age of 89 years. "He lived," says Lossing, the historian, "to see our confederacy increase from 13 to 30 stars, and from 3,000,000 of people to 20,000,000."—The Advance.

THE STORY OF A SPY.

Unpublished History of the War by Charles A. Dana.

Valuable Services of a Young Man Who Had Been a Department Clerk.

Charles A. Dana contributes to the North American Review for August a bit of "unpublished history" of the war of the rebellion. The incidents came under Mr. Dana's observation while he was assistant secretary of war. They comprise the services of a young man in the perilous character of a spy and are told without revealing the identity of the individual.

In the early part of 1864 "a slender and prepossessing young fellow, between 22 and 26 apparently," applied at the war department for employment as a spy within the confederate lines. He was a clerk in one of the departments. All he wanted was an order passing him through the federal lines and a horse. Inquiry disclosed nothing against the young man, but uniform testimony to his strong union predilections. The department gave him the desired pass and a horse and some money and he departed. Two or three weeks passed with no tidings of the spy, when one day he came into the department with a letter from Jefferson Davis to Clement C. Clay, an agent of the confederacy in Canada. He had passed through the lines, offered his services to Davis, gained his confidence, and was on his first mission. The letter, he said, was simply an introduction to Clay and Jacob Thompson, and assurance that the bearer could be trusted.

He carried the letter to Canada and brought back a dispatch to Davis, which the Washington authorities permitted to go unopened, the bearer vouching that it contained nothing of importance. Then back and forth the young man went, reporting to the war department on every trip. The messages, after the first, were opened and copied, and the originals carried forward. The resources of the government enabled it to supply new envelopes of the kind used in Richmond and Canada, and in case of need—as sometimes happened—engrave a special seal to reproduce the impression destroyed on opening packages.

One of the messages gave the details of a fire plot by which in New York, Chicago, Boston and other cities fires were to be started in many places by means of clockwork machines. By taking measures to head off this scheme its authenticity was established.

Finally, the spy brought in a dispatch giving details of an expedition preparing in Canada for a descent on Burlington, Vt. This was carefully prepared and sewed into the lining of the man's trousers. The importance of the original document, in making a case against Great Britain for sheltering the organizers of military expeditions, required its detention. President Lincoln was consulted.

"We must have this paper for Seward, said the president. "As for the young man, get him out of the scrape if you can." Secretary Stanton sent the young man on his way toward Richmond with the dispatch, with instructions to stop to feed and water his horse at a certain tavern in Alexandria at 9 o'clock in the evening. Meanwhile he sent orders to Gen. Wells, military governor of Alexandria, to be on the lookout for a suspect, alleged to be the bearer of important dispatches to the enemy, to arrest him and convey him under guard to the war department, and to witness the searching of his person. Everything worked as prepared. The spy was arrested and taken to the department under guard of three soldiers and Gen. Wells. Mr. Dana's account of the proceedings reads:

Of course no one but the two or three who had been in the secret were aware that this gentleman had quietly walked out of the war department only a few hours previously, and that the paper which was the cause of the entire ceremony had been sewed up in his clothes just before his departure. Gov. Wells reported that, while the prisoner had offered no resistance, he was very violent and outrageous in his language, and boasting fiercely of his devotion to the confederacy and his detestation of the union.

During the examination which followed he said nothing except to answer a few questions, but his bearing, patient, scornful, undaunted, was that of an incomparable actor. If Mr. Clay and Mr. Benjamin had been present they would have been more than certain that he was one of their noblest young men.

Every formality was observed—the writing out of the search and discoveries and signing of the witnesses. The spy was then consigned to the old Capitol prison, with secret instructions to the warden to afford him opportunity for escape. A few days later he walked into Mr. Dana's office. "Ah," said that gentleman, "you have run away!" "Yes, sir," he answered. "Did they shoot at you?" "They did, and didn't hit me; but I didn't think that would answer the purpose, so I shot myself through the arm."

Mr. Dana examined the wound. It was through the fleshy part of the forearm. "A more deliberate and less dangerous wound could not be; but it did not look trivial." The young man was ordered to get away to Canada, which he did without delay, and showed his wound as evidence of the danger he had encountered and the truth of his story—that his dispatches had been taken from him. Clay and Thompson believed him and gave him other dispatches to carry to Davis. The federal war department, to carry out the deception, and protect its agent, advertised his escape and offered a reward of $2,000 for his recapture. The reward was never claimed.

"The war was ended soon after this adventure," says Mr. Dana, "and, as his services had been of very great value, a new place, with the assurance of lasting employment, was found for the young man in one of the bureaus of the war department. He did not remain there long, however, and I don't know what has become of him. He was one of the cleverest creatures I ever saw. His style of patriotic living was sublime; it amounted to genius."

THE WAR IN CHILI.

American Officers Arrive in New York.

They Tell of the Revolution and the Bitter Feeling It Has Engendered.

New York, August 5.—Three bearded men with military bearing, their faces bronzed by exposure to a tropical sun, arrived at the Grand Hotel yesterday evening. They were Rear Admiral William P. McCann, Lieutenant Kenny and Lieutenant Osterhaus, of the United States Navy.

They came from Colon on the Pacific mail steamship Newport, which reached port yesterday. Rear Admiral McCann, when seen by a reporter, said:

"The Peruvian population, one and all, keep aloof from the terrible struggle which is going on in Chili. The civil war in Chili will probably progress until the government obtains some new men-of-war from Europe. A popular uprising that proves successful generally progresses. Delays and inaction are apt to prove fatal. The end of the war one way or the other would be a boon to the country as well as well as to the cause of peace and order.

It is difficult here at a distance, to understand the feeling that exists between the opposing sides. Our own civil war never brought out such an intensity of rage, hatred and malice. The wealthy aristocratic class is generally on the side of the revolution. The official class is led by President Balmaceda. The mass of the people, the rotos, the peones, follow the lead of their superiors in the social system according to the provinces in which they live.

The people, as we understand the word, have a precious little to do in Chili but to do as directed. The reports from the country which have appeared, have often been greatly exaggerated. Of course, the leading people of South America conduct affairs different from the Anglo-Saxon race. There is not much sentiment displayed towards any one who takes sides against the faction or party into whose possession he falls. Balmaceda has locked up those who shout Viva el Congreso in the streets of Valparaiso and Santiago. And the congressional suppressed the adherents of the government in Tarapaca.

"The American navy made a splendid showing on the coast. Three ships, the Baltimore, the Charleston, and the San Francisco, are a credit to any marine power. The United States navy was treated splendidly by both sides. The Itata did not land a single rifle. It was a great disappointment to the revolutionary party to lose the arms. In order to spare the natural feelings of sorrow the ship was sent to sea after dark so that the people on shore would not witness her departure. There were no threats or intimidations.

The authorities were notified that the Itata had violated our laws. Of course we had force enough to lend authority to the request, but this question was not raised. There was no need of raising it. The revolutionary army is generally uniformed and well disciplined. The jealousy which existed between the army and the navy kept and continues to keep the two branches of the service apart. The navy was the favored arm. The army felt that it was comparatively neglected.

There has been an immense wheat crop in Chili and the government has derived increased strength from that source. The Balmaceda people also have had more ready money. Those who have been engaged to undertake service for the government have been paid promptly. The officers and sailors on the Almirante Lynch and on the Almirante Condell, the two torpedo cruisers that blew up the Blanco Encalada, were heavily rewarded.

"I met Capt. Marago, who commanded the expedition. He is a man without fear or very much the same I imagine as Arturo Prat, who is canonized in the navy archives of Chili. The war will not last long. The country, once so prosperous and wealthy, will recover very slowly from the effects of the strife. It will require another generation to overcome the estrangement that exists between the two sides."

A BIG ARCTIC SPREE.

What a Deserting Sailor Found in a Camp of Polar Indians.

"Do you remember when a whole fleet of whalers was lost in the Arctic about fourteen years ago?" said James Hanna, one of the survivors of the Elizabeth to a San Francisco Examiner reporter. "Well, I was up there in a whaler the next season, and I came across relics of that big disaster in a very strange and interesting way. A boat-load of us went ashore at Point Barrow for some purpose, and it sort of struck me that I'd sooner see a little of that country than go back to the ship just then. So I stowed myself away among the rocks, and when my mates got ready to pull back to the ship they couldn't find me. I don't suppose they cared much, because they didn't fool away a great deal of time looking for me. After they left I struck out inland, and pretty soon I fell on a native village.

"The Injuns were pretty decent chaps and meant well, but they weren't fixed for entertaining visitors in first-class style. They couldn't speak English and their lingo was Dutch to me, but we agreed between us by signs that it was about time to pipe all hands to the galley, and they brought me two fathoms of jerked meat. It was a bit too strong for my taste. Then they dug up some blubber and other stuff that would make good slush for a mast; but it didn't hit my fancy, and I let on that I was not very hungry after all.

"When it was time to turn in they led me to a hut and showed me a pile of fur that didn't look so allfired clean. That was to be my bunk, and after a few months in the forecastle I wasn't kicking about a little dirt and grease. The hut was full of women, and I thought I would sit up until they left. When I got sleepy and yawned they told me to turn in; but I wanted to be polite and wait until the ladies had gone home. They didn't seem to be in a hurry, and pretty soon they shucked off all their duds and rolled themselves up in furs. I wasn't going to be outdone in politeness by a lot of Injun ladies, and I just peeled off my clothes and went to bed.

"In the morning I got up feeling a little rocky. My stomach was empty and the air in the hut was thicker than molasses. The thought of that fathoms of jerked meat made me sick, and I began to think I had made a blooming big mistake in my expedition. One of the head men poked his nose into the hut and made signs that were painfully like an invitation to have a cocktail with him. I tumbled out of the rugs and got into my clothes, blushing like a rose, because the ladies were looking at me, and the whole gang of us paddled out across country to a stretch of sand beach.

"I pondered what blooming game was up, not being able to see what was the use of toddling out there before breakfast, but one of the men, who had a walrus tusk in his hand, gave me a bleary wink and began scraping away the sand with his foot. Two or three inches below the surface he uncovered the bung and part of the bilge of a cask. Then he thumped the cask with the walrus tusk, just as a water-front barkeeper would handle a bung-starter, and when the bung came out I thought I smelt something natural.

"Another chap stepped up with a yard of rubber hose, put one end in the cask, and took a big pull at the other end. Then he handed me the hose, and I just filled my tank plumb to the Plimsoll mark with genuine water-front whisky. The whole tribe took a whack at it, and we all toddled back home drunk and joyous.

"I concluded that my skipping from the whaler was the biggest piece of luck that ever was, and I wasn't in any hurry to go aboard again. Talk about being cast away on an island where bread grows on trees and turtles lay eggs that roast on the sand without a fire! That's solitary confinement at hard labor alongside of tumbling into an Injun camp, where all you've got to do is to kick a hole in the sand and get blind drunk.

"One day when the chief had a lucid interval, having been too drunk or sick early in the morning to take his regular beach cocktail, I asked him where he got the liquor, and he led me around a point and showed me the charred wrecks of a lot of vessels. I saw that these were some of the whaling fleet that had been lost. When the ships came ashore the natives started in to strip them, and the first things they got out were the whisky casks and the medicine chests. Anybody who has been at sea knows what sort of stuff is stowed in a medicine chest for sailors. But the natives didn't know, and they pitched in and drank all the drugs and ate what wasn't drinkable.

"The chief gave me to understand that the tribe wasn't much struck on medicine chests, and he showed me where about half the original population of the village was buried. As well as I could make out from his signs and lingo he didn't feel very well himself for a few weeks after tackling the drugs, and he shed most of his teeth before he got through with the job.

"The survivors of the medicine spree thought the job had been put up on them, and when they got well enough to move around a bit they went and set fire to the wrecks.

"I was with the tribe for about six weeks, and was full all the time. Whenever a cask was emptied they scraped another hole in the sand and uncovered a fresh supply. I don't know how many barrels of liquor they had buried, but there must have been a lot of them.

"Finally I got tired of living on whisky for I never did get so that I could eat their grub, and one day when a vessel showed up near the point I persuaded some natives to take me out to her in a canoe, and I left them. A few days later we fell in with the very vessel I had deserted from, and I was not put aboard."

THE BIGGEST FISH.

It was a Whale Until It was Caught Much to the Captain's Discomfiture.

There is no better fishing ground around New York for those who delight in the capture of the weakfish than the neighborhood of the Highlands of Navesink, and there are few better sportsmen than the genial Captain Slevin, of the Second precinct.

The veracity of fishermen is not above suspicion, but now and then the French proverb that "It is always the unexpected that happens" is justified. At any rate this incident will be vouched for by a dozen.

On the 26th of July, which, I regret to say, was a Sunday, the Captain, guided by Hank Smith, who is the waterman all the skilled fisherman seek to secure went to a favorite fishing spot. Hank looked over the tackle and found that one of the hooks was in danger of getting rusty should have been passing just as couple of half hitches around it and made it fast. At the same time the captain was fastening the bit of cord that is attached to the rig to his line. Hank laughed at the knot the captain used, but for all that over it all went, and in a second the "biggest fish of the season" had carried the whole business away.

Of course there was weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth, and the captain loose from its shell, so he took a was found, and when the good people of Highlands returned from church full of piety and gossip, the capatin met them with a broad smile and a long string and for a few hours kept them all busy listening to his tale of how he lost the best fish that ever swam in the Shrewsbury.

But now see the danger of exaggeration. On Monday two young men of New York Messrs. Howard and Raymond came down. They secured Hank and went out to the same place that the captain had anchored at the day before. They caught a goodly basketfull (twenty-one in all,) but there was one infant—ai fingerling—a mere sardine. He was carefully put at the bottom of the pile and the lot delivered over to the scullion, who promptly turned the basket upside down and brought Mr. Tom Thumb to the top. Just at this moment the captain sauntered by. He saw a pile of fish and strolled up to look them over. The scullion seized the top one and plunged the knife in to clean him. As he opened the belly with the knife out came the captain's lost hooks and snells, easily identified by the two peculiar knots.

It was an odd series of coincidences. That the fish should have been taken by another party on another day, taken to the hotel tone of severall, where both loser and finder stopped, that the captain swore that he'd never go fishing again if Florence offered further financial inducement. After still another bargain over tackle and bait we at last got off.

No Bites.

The fisherman, although he had gained every point, was still in a sulky mood. Florence suggested a certain spot to anchor, but the boatsman rowed to a place of his own choice and plump down went the anchor.

Well, we fished there a long time, with nary a nibble, except from some crabs and a few sunfish, and our sole occupation was rebailing our denuded hooks.

As he had nothing else to do, the boatsman took out one of the lines for the use of which Florence had paid, put on it bait the cost of which also came out of the comedian's pocket, and joined us in the sport without invitation.

Florence chatted away in his usual lively style. He wasn't going to be dismantled by the fact that he hadn't brought a single fish to the surface. The hours passed slowly by and the sun began to sink beneath the Staten Island hills, with not one catch to recommend us.

"Great Scott! this will never do," exclaimed Florence, as he wiped the perspiration from his brov. "We've got to take something home if we have to buy it."

As he spoke Francis gave a lunge at his line. He had something hooked, that was certain. It was a good one, too, for it made a great resistance. After a brief but lively struggle the bold fisherman's opened his mouth a'nee we anchored, landed it. It was a fine, big flounder, weighing some five or six pounds.

"That'll do," said Florence. "We'll not bother with the fish any more. Pull for the shore, sailor! Oh, pull for the shore!"

The boatman slowly hauled on the anchor and pulled toward the beach, where he landed us adout 6 p. m., as the dinner bell rang at the Williams cottage.

Florence went down into his cash box and counted over the shekels to the boat owner, who, first making sure he had every cent, began to push his boat out again into the bay.

"Come Back, He Cried in Accents Wild."

"Hold on," cried Florence. "That flounder."

"What flounder?"

"The one we caught."

"You didn't catch it," saucily replied the fellow. "I caught it."

"But we paid you for the boat," said Florence, growing wrathy.

"And ye got it, didn't ye?"

"We paid you for your bait?"

"Well, ye got that too, didn't ye?"

"We paid for the use of the tackle."

"Well, ye used it, didnt ye?"

"And we paid for your services as well."

"You paid me to row you out and in, and I've done it. You didn't say anythin' about my fishin' for yees. Now I caught that fish an' I'm goin' to take it home. So good-by."

And with that the boat sped out with the fine fat flounder. A liberal use of blanks and dashes may best describe the blessing that the actor sent out over the waters after the triumphant fisherman. I've never heard Florence from that day to this refer in the most remote way to that flounder.—New York Herald.

Special Low Prices on Pianos at THE WHITNEY-CURRIER CO.

Inasmuch as we have not moved our place of business for more than twenty years the expense incident to tearing up and removing every two or three years has been saved. This enables us to give lower prices, better bargains and better goods than any mercantile concern who uses the necessity for "moving" as a pretext for offering sham inducements. We shall continue through July and August, this year and next, to offer extraordinary inducements to buyers of pianos and organs to patronize our house. We sell the best pianos made, acknowledged and recognized as such, as well as commoner grades, such as offered by our competitors. Our price, when grade and quality is considered, is lower, by far, than has heretofore been offered by any Toledo dealer or agent.

FISHING IN JAMAICA.

Queer Modes Employed by the Maroons in Catching the Red Snapper.

The red snapper is a fish found in all parts of the Caribbean sea, says Allan Eric in the Week's sport. It is particularly plentiful in all the bays and inlets, large and small, around the coast of Jamaica, West Indies. Its color is red, or, more properly, perhaps, bright pink. Its flesh is very fine grained, delicate, and sweet, and therefore delicious eating. The red snapper forms a very important, indeed, a staple, article of food with the natives, and the methods of taking them employed by the Maroons are novel and very interesting.

While traveling in the island last winter I made a brief tarry at Yallah's bay on the southeast coast, where I had a good opportunity of seeing how the natives fish for these brilliant denizens of the Caribbean and for observing the people and their curious outfit, consisting of fish-traps, anchors for securing the same, canoes and nets.

The trap consists of a kind of basket with meshes about two inches in diameter on all sides. It is woven from strips of the wild cane which grows profusely along the banks of all streams and rivers, and which the natives cut with their machetes and slit into strips about half an inch wide. This open-work basket or trap is about three feet long, rounded at one end and square at the other. The two sides are a foot apart.

The two flat sides each measure, from edge to edge, two feet, the width of the basket; making a somewhat flat basket with the mouth at the square end, the other being rounded like a rocker. The square end is closed by meshes of cane, with the exception of a round hole about eight inches in diameter. From this hole, extending downward to about the center of the trap, there is a spiral, tunnel-shaped tube, the lower end of which, opening into the inside of the trap, is a little smaller than the upper end, where it is joined to the end of the trap. This device is taken out and set in from one to two fathoms of water, rarely more than two fathoms. I should have mentioned that in one of the flat sides there is a small opening, covered by a hinged door, a little larger, through which the fish are taken out.

Loading the traps into their canoes the natives paddle out a few rods from shore. Their trap is then baited with bits of meat that are secured to two small, pointed spindles of wood fastened to the inside of the rounded end. The opening at the side is closed and stones are used as weights.

The Maroon canoe is an interesting craft, for the reason that it is hollowed out entire from the trunk of the ceiba or "cotton tree." These huge trees are found growing all along the coast, and, as their trunks are very large, long and straight, and the wood, which very much resembles poplar, is easy to work, they are made use of whenever a canoe is to be made. The canoes are from 15 to 18 feet in length, about three feet wide, and 18 inches deep.

The sides are perfectly straight, making the canoe the same width near the ends that it is in the middle. The ends are exactly alike, each projecting upward about four inches. The bottom very closely resembles that of an American birch canoe. These Maroon craft are very graceful and finely made, both the inside and the outside being finished almost to a microscopic nicety. Seats are provided for the occupants, and both the single and double bladed paddles are used. These canoes will weather seas and surf where many a more civilized craft would be swamped or broken to pieces.

The Maroons have still another way of taking the red snapper, one requiring a great deal of skill and alertness. This is generally employed near the shore in very shallow water. Armed with a circular net about four feet in diameter, made of the twisted fibers of the aloe, with the mouth held open by a loop of the plant "supplejack," the net weighted with stones bound to the hoop so it will instantly sink, the native wades out until the water is up to his knees. With net held in front of him, he stands motionless, gazing steadily down into the water, the mirror-like surface of which is undisturbed by the rollers of the Caribbean, which are broken by the low coral reef that extends across the entrance of the bay. Oftentimes the shallow water for rods along the shore will be dotted with blacks, each with a net in hand, standing as motionless as a flamingo.

But watch them. In a moment one of the blacks makes a quick motion, the net descends, and with a splash disappears under the water; and a snapper swimming leisurely along suddenly finds himself caged in the net, the hoop lying on the bottom and the net preventing his escape. Then the native stoops over and with a dexterous motion twirls the net around, at the same time turning its mouth upward, and, lifting it out of the water, the snapper is quickly transferred to a large bag carried slung to the waist. Even the women engage in this style of fishing. Both men and women wear nothing but a breech-cloth while fishing which gives them great freedom of motion.

The red snapper will take the hook quite readily, but he is not gamy, and I like the horn-pout of New England fresh waters. He in no way resembles the pout, however, as the snapper has distinct scales and a small mouth. This fish is usually about fifteen inches long.

Woe to the Conquered.

The Romans cried "VAE VICTIS!" "Woe to the conquered!" at their triumphs. To-day many of us are being conquered—our peace, our rest and daily appetite wrested from us by that invader of the stomach, dyspepsia. Succor we sue for from a hundred sources. Temporary relief we sometimes obtain. But a hearty meal, the simplest indiscretion in diet, and the Protean imp returns with redoubled vigor to torment us. A persistent use of the great anti-dyspeptic and regulating tonic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is best calculated to drive into permanent banishment every form of indigestion, temporary or chronic. No less efficacious is it for malaria, biliousness, constipation, rheumatism, kidney and bladder ailments. This remedy of specific utility and many uses overcomes them all. 'Tis a safeguard, too, against the effects of temperature apt to revive an attack of "La Grippe."

THE TREATMENT given at this Dispensary is peculiarly our own and is different from that given by any medical practitioner, the remedies used being the discoveries of our Dr. James Charles Evans, who has given all of the best years of his life to their production and perfection. They are infallible. Their efficacy is amply attested by the thousands of cures that have been effected by our treatment. No one need suffer from the many ills above enumerated because we can guarantee a cure if the sufferer will but call at our Dispensary or write us.

OUR GUARANTEE IS NO CURE NO PAY. In proof of which we are willing and anxious to take the cases of RESPONSIBLE AFFLICTED PERSONS ON THEIR OWN TERMS. Those suffering from NERVOUS DEBILITY, the symptoms of which are a dull, distressed mind, which unfits them for performing the business and social duties of life, making happy marriages an utter impossibility, causing depression of spirits, evil forebodings of the future, feeling as tired in the morning as when retiring, lost in mood, trembling, confusion of thought, watery and weak eyes, constipation, paleness, pain and weakness in the limbs, etc., should consult us at once and immediately be restored to strong, vigorous MANHOOD.

All cases and correspondence are treated with the confidence that our high reputation guarantees they will receive.
